Hanes Sees U. S. Business On Threshold Of Recovery

Acting Treasury Head Predicts 'Move Forward'; Tax Study Planned for Recess

Acting Secretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes yesterday expressed the belief that the country was on the threshold of "a real forward move in business."

"I am very optimistic about business prospects," Hanes declared. "They look better to me by far than they did 60 days ago."

This forecast came as Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Ways and Means sub-committee on taxation, revealed that the groundwork was being laid for a thorough overhauling of the Federal tax structure at the next session of Congress.

Three Reasons for Views

Hanes gave three reasons why the business upclimb, as he views it, is gathering momentum—increasing forward orders, the sound condition of inventories, and the numerous individual instances of improvement.

The tax sub-committee has been meeting all week with experts of the Treasury and the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation for the purpose of mapping a program of tax studies to form the basis of legislation.

The studies will be conducted by the Treasury and the Congressional Joint Committee during the remainder of the summer and early fall. Thus, when the sub-committee resumes meetings, probably around November 1, members will have at their elbows up-to-date data on the tax friction points which they will attempt to iron out.

Influenced by "Political" Year

How far tax revision can go admittedly will be greatly influenced by the fact that 1940 will be an intensely "political" year. But the scope of the sub-committee's study, it is understood, embraces all points where Federal taxes are supposed to be depressing or irritating business.

Cooper said the sub-committee probably would hold one or more additional meetings before turning over the tax assignment to Treasury and Congressional experts. He would make no statement as to the individual matters to be included in the revision program.

"We are mapping a broad course," he declared. "An intensive study will be made of the whole internal revenue structure, and this will include court decisions on tax questions."

Indorsed By President

The question of lowering exemptions on individual incomes—which President Roosevelt has indorsed with some reservations—will be included in the tax study as a matter of course, it is believed.

Whether Congress will lower exemptions at the next session, with a Presidential campaign only a few months away, however, concededly is highly questionable—even though the Senate, during consideration of the 1939 revenue act, voted favorably momentarily on the La Follette base broadening proposals.

Other questions to be considered will include reciprocal taxation of securities, reduction in the high surtax rates, increases in income taxes on incomes ranging between $5,000 and $250,000, and adjustments in the so-called "nuisance" taxes to eliminate those which operate as irritants while raising scarcely sufficient revenue to pay collection costs.

Morgenthau has indicated that the Administration would be agreeable to a reduction in the top surtax rates if tax-exemption for Federal, State and municipal securities could be ended. But, owing to opposition from municipalities, possibility that the Nation will ever shake off tax-exemption for securities is recognized as remote.

10 More Playgrounds Reopen As Capital Children Cheer

Public Recreation Areas Available to District Youngsters Now Total 116; Others May Remove Locks if Supervisors Are Found

Amid the cheering of hundreds of boys and girls, ten more school playgrounds were opened yesterday on orders of Lewis R. Barrett, District recreation director.

Opening of the grounds was made possible by an allocation of $1,350 from current appropriations. The playspots whose locks were removed are Curtis, Blake, Cranch, A. J. Bowen, Syphax, Randle Highlands, Truesdale, Bell, Crummell and Brent.

These 10, plus the 4 school playgrounds and 2 park areas opened last week, bring to 116 the total of public recreation spaces now available to District children. Others may be opened if additional WPA supervisors are provided.

Barrett conferred yesterday with Miss Sibyl Baker, director of community centers, and his four recreation board assistants. They are reported to have discussed not only plans for this summer but also for the fall season.

It is still undecided whether administrative offices of the District Recreation Board will be moved into the old Force School building. At present the board's personnel is quartered in the Interior, old Police Court and Franklin School buildings.

Taft Tosses Hat in Ring For 1940

Assailing New Deal, Ohioan Backs Relief, Housing, Pensions; Sees 'Unpleasant Job'

By the Associated Press

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, entered the Republican Presidential race yesterday with a statement in which he denounced "New Deal fallacies" and supported relief, old-age pensions, subsidized housing and other aids to "the less fortunate people."

Taft, son of the former President, sent a letter to George F. Eyrich, of Cincinnati, declaring his willingness to stand for the Republican nomination. Eyrich is chairman of the Hamilton County (Ohio) Republican executive committee, which has indorsed Taft for the nomination.

The letter, issued by Taft's office during his absence in Ohio, said that "the unpleasant job which lies before the next President of the United States is such that no sensible man could be eager to assume it."

Puts It Up to Ohio G. O. P.

Although saying he preferred his present Senate seat to any other office, Taft added that "I will not run away from a harder job, but whether I am a candidate for any other office is entirely up to the Republicans of Ohio."

He called attention to "peculiar provisions" of the Ohio constitution which require persons running for delegate to the national convention to state their choice for the Presidency and to obtain the written consent of the man so designated.

"As an Ohio matter," Taft added, "I shall be willing when the time comes to give my consent to have my name designated as the first choice by candidates for delegates throughout the State."

"That's Fine," Says Vandenberg

On hearing of the Ohioan's statement, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said: "That's fine—the more the merrier."

Vandenberg previously has indicated his own willingness to accept the nomination.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, acting minority leader, told reporters that Taft's statement was a "logical development" and was indicative of the Ohio Senator's "mental honesty" in answering the Hamilton County committee's indorsement.

Although emphasizing that he was committed to no candidate, Austin praised Taft's Senate record and asserted that the Ohio man had demonstrated "industry and ability" since he took his seat in the chamber last January.

Comment by Bridges

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, who also is being boomed for the nomination, told reporters: "It would appear at this stage of the game that there would be a group of men available for the Republican convention to choose from, and I believe they will be able to choose an effective candidate."

It was reported that Bridges would start a speaking campaign during September and visit every State west of the Mississippi River.

State Politics Control Wins Senate Test

Committee Approves Neely Bill to Put U. S.-Paid Workers Under Hatch Plan

A bill by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, to extend the principle of the Hatch "clean politics" bill to thousands of State employes was approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday.

Senator Neely said he had no hope of getting action on the measure at this session, but he predicted that it would become law before the 1940 campaign gets under way.

The Neely bill would curtail political activities by all State employes paid in part from Federal funds. There is an army of such employes, most of them working for State road and unemployment compensation departments.

A State Merit System

The bill would require also that all State workers employed in any agency drawing funds from the Federal Government be appointed under a merit system approved by the United States Civil Service Commission. They would be appointed after a competitive examination. Promotions would be based upon meritorious work.

Not only would they be prohibited from taking part in any political campaign, but they would be prohibited from contributing to any political fund. Moreover, they would be subject to dismissal if a husband, wife, father, brother, sister, child, father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law or sister-in-law was an officer of any national, State or local political committee.

Minton Foresees Opposition

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, said that there would be "substantial opposition to extending the law to State employes."

President Roosevelt, in signing the Hatch bill, suggested to Congress that it study the question of extending the objectives of the Hatch bill to State and local employes who participate actively in Federal elections. The President did not suggest that such legislation be limited to those State employes who are paid in part from Federal funds.

Murphy to Advise Workers

Attorney General Murphy said yesterday that the Department of Justice had been flooded with questions concerning the Hatch act. He announced that, at the President's request, the department would apprise Government employes as to what limitations the act imposes.

Murphy said he expected questions concerning the act to come from the heads of departments. The Department of Justice, he added, would handle only specific questions, ignoring those of a hypothetical nature.

The Attorney General said he expected somebody to challenge the constitutionality of the Hatch act in court, and said he would welcome such a test.

Senator Neely introduced his bill after Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, had announced that he would seek such legislation at the next session.

Economy Coalition Buries Housing Bill, Dooms Wage Changes

Led Defeat of the Housing Bill

Three seldom-heard-of Congressmen stepped into the news spotlight yesterday when they led the fight which resulted in the House refusing to consider the Senate-approved bill to expand President Roosevelt's low-rent housing and slum-clearance program. Left to right—Representatives Monroney, of Oklahoma; Gore, of Tennessee, and Mills, of Arkansas

191-170 Vote Kills Slum-Clearing Plan; Adjournment Date Still Is Uncertain

By Robert C. Albright

The House yesterday by a vote of 191 to 170 crushed the last remaining vestige of the President's lending program, refusing to consider the Senate-approved $800,000,000 housing bill.

It was President Roosevelt's third decisive defeat in three days at the hands of a House on a rampage against spending and eager for the fall of the sine die gavel.

Hardly had the housing measure received the death stroke when Majority Leader Rayburn announced that no action would be taken on three sets of pending wage-hour law amendments.

Adjournment Still in Doubt

"The House does not at this time seem inclined to consider any legislation of far-reaching importance," said Rayburn.

Despite this swift clearing of dockets of two major controversies, the "adjournment-by-Saturday" goal was left still uncertain by slow Senate committee progress on the House-pruned third deficiency bill and promised relief, farm and social security riders. An eleventh-hour effort by House and Senate conferees to agree on social security amendments failed dismally, but leaders were willing to let this measure go over if other bills clear.

Barkley Ready for Round Trip

Senate Majority Leader Barkley was optimistic. He said adjournment tonight "is possible." Nonetheless, he made arrangements for a swift flight to Kentucky and back for early Saturday, so he might vote in the primaries and return if necessary for a delayed adjournment.

Yesterday's rebuff to the Administration's slum clearance bill, increasing United States Housing Authority borrowing power by $800,000,000, was a foregone conclusion. The rule was called up against the advice of leaders on the insistence of the President that a record be made. Reports spread that the President intended to make housing and lending bill votes an issue, along with the earlier neutrality defeat, in Western tour speeches in October. He already has said that taxpayers will want to know names of those who voted "no."

The coalition that turned thumbs down on his housing bill comprised 54 Democrats and 137 Republicans. Voting to consider the bill were 159 Democrats, 8 Republicans, 2 Progressives, and 1 American-Laborite—21 votes shy of the number needed.

Gore Makes Maiden Speech

A far wider margin against the housing bill had been indicated in earlier polls, but intense pressure and trading between urban and farm bloc members on proposed restoration of the $119,000,000 deficiency bill cut in Commodity Credit Corporation funds apparently weakened the opposition.

A fire-eating maiden speech by a 31-year-old first-term Tennessee Democrat, Representative Albert A. Gore, helped deal the fatal blow to the bill. Gore charged the United States Housing Authority with disseminating "reprehensibly deceptive, misleading propaganda" and declared that if he stayed in Congress 40 years "this debt will still be unpaid."

"This housing program is in no respect self-liquidating," he told the House. "It is not contemplated that any revenue whatever shall at any time ever be recovered by the Government."

While the bill calls only for an $800,000,000 increase in Housing Authority borrowing, he declared that annual Federal contributions toward keeping rents low would cost $2,700,000,000 over an authorized 60-

FBI Gives D.C. Police Clean Bill of Health

No Graft Found in Numbers Inquiry, Murphy Announces

Attorney General Frank Murphy yesterday officially ended the investigation of Washington policemen and at the same time gave the force a clean bill of health.

Murphy said that Federal agents, having questioned approximately 90 local policemen, had submitted a report to him. He added, however, that he wouldn't bother to make it public.

The Attorney General said the investigation into the conduct of a judge of the Police Court was "just about" finished.

From the time that it became known two months ago that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were questioning policemen, Attorney General Murphy insisted that the Police Department was not being investigated "as such."

At the outset, approximately 70 policemen were summoned to the Department of Justice and questioned. Later 20 more were called in, including several high-ranking police officers.

The policemen were under the impression at first that they were to be questioned in connection with the case of the Police Court judge. The inquiry, however, soon veered sharply as the Federal agents began asking them personal questions.

Last week Murphy said the questioning of the policemen was in connection with the numbers racket. At the same time, he announced that nothing unfavorable had been found.

However, Detective Sergt. Jack Baker has been cited to appear Tuesday before the Police Trial Board to answer two charges of violating the police manual growing out of the F. B. I. investigation. The charges, according to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, concern Baker's alleged failure to turn in a watch and a surgical instrument he acquired in line of duty.

Grand Juror, Ex-Policeman Visit 'Jimmy's'

Both Face Questioning As Officers Check on Patrons of Casino

Several public officials of Prince Georges County and "other important persons" may be involved in the investigation of Jimmy LaFontaine's, it was revealed last night as police began a check-up of tag numbers of patrons of the casino.

State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., said a preliminary examination of data gathered by two police officers in two days of watching the entrance of the gambling establishment revealed some "surprising information."

The persons to whom the tags are listed will probably be summoned to testify for the State, Wheatley said.

Grand Juryman Noted

Among those seen driving in and out of LaFontaine's yesterday were a former county police officer and a member of the recent grand jury.

A number of the patrons yesterday attempted to avoid the police officers by parking their cars in the District and walking into the establishment through a private gateway in the high board fence that surrounds the grounds.

Corpl. John F. Dent and Officer Charles Thomsen, of the county force, however, patrolled Eastern avenue and part of Bladensburg road, checking on these cars. It was understood that District Police

Roosevelt Names Ray Atherton as Danish Envoy

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Ray Atherton, of Illinois, to be Minister to Denmark.

He also sent to the Senate the nomination of Arthur J. Altmeyer, of Wisconsin, for another term, expiring August 13, 1945, on the Social Security Board.

Adoption Agent Ordered to Get Baby to Court

Mrs. Grover Given Five Days to Act in 2d Case of Kind

Justice Goldsborough yesterday gave Mrs. Annie L. Grover, child adoption agent, five days to bring before him a baby she got from its poor Maryland parents and gave to a prosperous Connecticut couple.

"I think she can get this baby here if she wants to," said the justice, who declared at first Mrs. Grover was in contempt of court, when he opened a hearing yesterday on the custody of 4-month-old Barbara Alicia Thorne.

Mrs. Grover was in court for the second time in two days as a result of legal battles over children who passed through her agency and were turned over to persons who, she testified Wednesday, paid her $100 or more for expenses.

Before Justice Goldsborough yesterday was the effort of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Thorne, of East

Endurance Fliers Begin Twelfth Day Aloft

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 3 (AP).—Hunter and Humphrey Moody started their twelfth day aloft in a light monoplane over the Springfield airport and showed no inclination tonight to stop their endurance test.

At 6 p. m. (E. S. T.) they had been flying 266 hours, two days past the previous light plane record.

Leaders Agree To Peace in Auto Strike

Rank and File To Vote on Accord Of the Negotiators

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 4 (Friday).—The strike of 7,500 skilled workers employed in 12 plants of General Motors Corporation was settled early today.

James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, said an agreement terminating the walkout, which began July 5, was reached by negotiators for the corporation and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, which called the strike.

The proposed settlement, he said, will be submitted to a meeting of union members here at 1 p. m. today and, if approved there, then will be acted upon separately by the strikers at the plants affected.

The terms of the settlement were not announced and Dewey indicated they may be withheld until finally approved or rejected. Neither was there any information concerning when the men would return to work if they ratify the agreement.

At this afternoon's meeting the plan will go before members of the U. A. W.-C. I. O.'s executive board and strike leaders from each plant.

The strike was called by the union to enforce demands for a contract covering tool and die workers, engineers and maintenance employes, but there have been reports that the settlement would take in production workers as well.

Those who walked out were engaged in preparing for 1940 automobile manufacturing.

Boy, 8, on Way to Buy Candy Is Year's 50th Auto Fatality

Death halted a celebration for 8-year-old George Tarant last night, after he had found a "lucky" penny and started out to buy his mother a birthday present.

GEORGE

The youngster was run over by a truck in front of his home, 2917 Twelfth street northeast, in sight of his parents. He suffered a ruptured liver, five fractured ribs and other injuries.

He was the year's fiftieth traffic fatality here and the tenth child to be killed on District streets in 1939.

Little George and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Tarant, were sitting on the porch just before the rain storm broke when the child found a penny. He was overjoyed. Now, he said, he could buy his mother a present. She celebrated her birthday the day before. He would buy her a peppermint stick at the store across the street.

The child, according to police, dashed down the steps, and ran out from between two parked automobiles into the path of a delivery truck. The boy's father rushed him to a doctor, and then to Sibley Hospital, where he died.

Witnesses said the boy apparently saw the approaching vehicle and attempted to jump back, but was knocked down by a front fender.

Driver of the truck, police said, was Mike Leon, 45, of 102 Ridge road southeast.

A second grade pupil at Crosby Noyes School, George had several times voiced his one ambition, according to neighbors. He wanted to become a member of the school safety patrol.

93-Degree Heat Fells 1 Before Thunderstorm

A Brooklyn woman was prostrated yesterday by heat which drove the mercury to a top of 93 degrees and won for Washington workers the dubious privilege of frying in the streets rather than roasting in their offices.

Within an hour after many departments sent their employes home early, a thunderstorm swept in from the southwest, sending the temperature down 14 degrees to 79 at 7 p. m.

Cloudy and "moderately warm" weather was in sight for today, the Weather Bureau said.

Mrs. Ella Scherer, 48, was overcome by heat at Union Station a few minutes after she arrived from her home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gambling Boat Siege Goes On

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 3 (AP).—The "blockade of Santa Monica Bay," with sheriff's deputies in small motor launches laying siege to a large gambling boat, entered its second night.

Owner Tony Cornero Stralla, pacing the deck of his swanky casino, the Rex, from time to time picked up a megaphone and shouted defiance at the launches floating just beyond reach of hoses set up to prevent, with heavy streams of water, any boarding of the ship.

Texas Sheriff, Beer Runner Duel to Death

Rusk, Tex., Aug. 3 (AP).—The sharpshooting young sheriff of dry Cherokee County and a tavern keeper shot each other to death early today over a load of beer.

Myrtle Stanley, 25, was wounded in the pistol duel between Sheriff Bill Brunt, 29, and Isaiah Creel, 42, in whose roadhouse inn she was employed. A murder charge was placed against her.

The woman said she and Creel were returning from Kilgore with a load of beer when Brunt after several attempts to halt their car shot the tire off a front wheel.

As the sheriff approached on foot Creel fired once, the bullet striking Brunt in the heart.

The officer fired three or four times before he fell. One bullet struck Creel in the chest, another hit the woman in the leg.

'Rabble' Challenge 31 Nazis to Duel

Budapest, Aug. 3 (AP).—Thirty-one Nazi members of Parliament were challenged to duels today by the members of the Hungarian "Ragged Guard," who charged they had been termed "rabble" in Parliamentary debate.

The guardists are extreme nationalists, who fought as a free corps in the annexation of Ruthenia. They asserted Hubay, fuehrer of the Nazi Arrow-Cross Party, referred to them as "rabble," which Hubay denied.

Ex-Justice's Own Ruling Loses Case to Invalidate His Wedding

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, Aug. 3.—Madeline Braniff Branson won validation of her 1930 marriage to Fred P. Branson and $250 a month today after using against him the former State Supreme Court justice's own ruling in a similar case.

Branson contended his marriage to the 47-year-old stenographer was not legal because it occurred within six months after his first wife divorced him.

In rebuttal, Hal G. Thurman, Madeline's attorney, cited Branson's own opinion in a similar case in 1923 that co-habitation after the six-month period had elapsed constituted a legal marriage.

District Judge John B. Wilson, who ruled in favor of Madeline upheld that theory, declaring:

"I don't think there ever was a couple that made such a time and spent so much money trying to get married. They pledged vows in a civil ceremony and under church law and after six months resided together as man and wife."

Evidence introduced in the trial indicated Branson and Madeline had gone through a civil ceremony in New York and later a church ceremony in New Orleans.

Branson moved for a new trial and said he would file notice of appeal.

He had testified his affair with Madeline and his divorce settlement with his first wife cost him $140,000. He pleaded he was "broke."

Madeline alleged he was worth $250,000.

Judge Wilson said he could not find that Madeline pressed Branson to divorce his first wife to permit their marriage but that in 1923 there

Since the Garner - for - President boom began to sag a little bit, the gossip in the Senate cloakrooms is that Cactus Jack has told some Senators that he isn't really a candidate—just an anti-Roosevelt rallying point . . . Sen. Shay Minton has rebuked fellow Senators for saying that his man McNutt is just a stalking horse to round up Roosevelt delegates.

A little group of solemn thinkers is planning to send each member of Congress a little black-bordered announcement every time someone dies of malnutrition anywhere in the Republic.

Cong. John Coffee, of Tacoma, says about three die of pantry trouble in his State each week.

—he was the only one in step"

Startling proof that one Congressman may be right while 360 Congressmen are wrong (and that the 360 may change their minds) comes as a sequel to the famous 360 to 1 vote reported here recently. The solitary "No!" on a veterans' pension bill, was by Costello, of California, who objected to two sections of the act, though the rest of it was okay with him.

Now the other 360 Congressmen have swung over with Costello.

The bill went over to the Senate, where the committee struck out the two sections Costello didn't like. Then it was sent back to the House, which now agreed unanimously with the elimination of the two sections of the bill against which only Costello had voted.

Costello's loud "no" helped save the Government about $13,000,000, and has left more funds available for wounded veterans.

There's an immense curiosity about Senator Borah's overseas "sources" of information, which he told the President he esteemed as highly as the State Dept.'s . . . Thus far, he hasn't chosen to enlighten anyone about them.

Does he mean the foreign papers he reads?

Does he mean the mimeographed "weekly letters" or "tip sheets" which some members of the Foreign Relations Committee see?

Does he mean post cards from tourists?

"—a date with Mars?"

At last, from an eminent diplomat, I have corroboration of the fact that Hitler regularly consults astrologers and is swayed by their advice. He has a lucky star, so he thinks, and the near approach of the planet Mars has excited him greatly. European diplomats think there's some connection between August 25, now the "red letter" war date on their calendars, and Mars' intimate presence.

Hitler may think he has a date with Mars.

In two ways the 1939 Senate reminds old timers of Senates of long ago—no, not the oratory and high-mindedness:

(1) Every now and then a Senator appears on the floor or in a committee hearing with a snootful.

(2) Some of the humbler frequenters of the Senate wing are surreptitiously selling souvenirs and neckties to tourists.

One of the quaintest little melodramas of the season occurred when John O'Connor, the purged Tammany Congressman, leaped to his feet during a luncheon for Admiral Byrd, the explorer, and harangued the lunchers about "keeping the American flag on American whalers" in the Antarctic. O'Connor apparently was doing a little lobbying for a largely foreign-owned whaling corporation, largely manned by foreign seamen, which is trying to escape high import duties on its whale oil, and shedding crocodile tears about the historic "American whaling industry" in the process.

Social Security Conferees Still Seek Accord

Final Pre-Adjournment Effort for Compromise Slated for Today

A final pre-adjournment effort to reach a compromise on amendments to the social security act will be made this morning by Senate and House conferees undaunted by fruitlessness of a three-hour session yesterday.

Representatives of both House and Senate declared last night that "we are still as far apart as when we started."

Meanwhile, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, served notice that if conferees are unable to agree on the bill as a whole, he will offer a proposal to freeze pay roll taxes at 1 per cent for three years as a rider on a minor bill. Under existing law, the tax will jump to 1½ per cent January 1.

Impasse on Three Points

Both Senate and House are in agreement to keep pay roll taxes at 1 per cent, but the conferees have reached an apparent impasse on three other major points in the bill. These are:

The Connally amendment, which would require the Federal Government to pay $2 for every $1 contributed by the States toward old-age benefits, up to a total of $15.

May Seek Special Vote

A special House vote may be asked on the Connally amendment, the principal point at issue, although Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee said yesterday he was not planning such a move.

In announcing his plans to jam the 1 per cent pay roll tax through as a rider, Vandenberg said that "it would be a calamity for this bill to fail of passage before Congress adjourns."

The bill Vandenberg has picked out to carry the rider is a proposal of Majority Leader Barkley to grant refunds on taxes paid on liquor destroyed in the Ohio River floods of 1936 and 1937.

Roosevelt Seeks To Speed System Of Reviewing Bills

With Congress in its adjournment throes flooding the White House with some 300 newly passed bills, President Roosevelt yesterday undertook to speed up the process of departmental review which precedes his approval.

Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, said he had been instructed to notify heads of departments and agencies to have their legislative liaison officers study bills, while they are still in the Congressional hopper, so as to expedite their reports to the President.

Since bills have to be signed by the Vice President and Speaker, it usually takes a day or two after they are passed for them to reach the White House, Early pointed out. The investigation which interested departments make of each bill before the President decides whether to sign or veto it takes another seven or eight days, but the new system is expected to shorten considerably the time between passage and Presidential action.

Sub-committee Speeds Third Deficiency Bill

Measure May Reach Senate Floor Today; Riders May Delay It

Striving to insure adjournment by tomorrow night, a Senate sub-committee worked hard all day yesterday in an effort to bring out to the floor today the last appropriation bill of the session.

This measure, the third deficiency bill, will be ready for Senate action late today, Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, sub-committee chairman, predicted.

It was widely expected yesterday that the Senate would restore the principal cut made by the House in an orgy of economy, an item of $119,000,000 to replenish impaired capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation. It formed the major part of the $162,000,000 House slash in budget estimates. As it now stands, the bill provides for only $53,190,056, compared with budget figures of $215,891,168.

Agency Heads Protest Cuts

Throughout the day yesterday, the anteroom of the Senate Appropriations Committee teemed with heads of Government agencies waiting for their turn to plead for restoration of funds knocked out in the House. They were headed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Secretary Wallace declared yesterday it would be a "national calamity" if Congress refused to appropriate the $119,000,000.

In a letter to Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, he said that "the appropriation is vitally necessary to the success of the farm program." He said the corporation has only $9,000,000 unobligated and that unless the capital was restored no new loans could be made.

"Abandonment of the farm loan programs," he wrote, "would remove an important part of the entire farm program, cause a sharp decline in farm prices and greatly reduce their ability to pay outstanding debts to banks and Government agencies."

The deficiency bill is likely to be delayed in its passage by the announced determination of several Senators to attempt to add riders for their pet projects. At least four amendments modifying WPA regulations will be offered.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will seek restoration of prevailing wage rates on WPA projects, a provision voted by the Senate in the 1940 relief act but eliminated in conference. Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, will attempt to restore the WPA theater project, while Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, will try to abolish the regulation requiring a 30-day furlough for workers who have been on relief 18 months.

Another amendment will be offered to prevent reductions in the present monthly security wage of WPA workers.

Face Bitter Fight

All of these amendments will be bitterly resisted by the House conferees.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asserted he would attempt to induce the Senate to accept a proposal originally tacked on to the defunct self-liquidating loan bill—which would make available $612,000,000 of Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation funds for refinancing farm mortgages at low interest rates.

The Gallup Poll

Survey Shows Sharp Rise in the Popularity Of McNutt as Democratic Candidate

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug 3.—Paul V. McNutt's appointment to the post of Federal Security Administrator, with its attendant publicity, has caused a sharp rise in his popularity among Democrats as a Presidential candidate for 1940, judging by a national American Institute of Public Opinion survey.

GEORGE GALLUP

The suave Indiana statesman, whom some observers think the Roosevelt Administration is grooming for 1940, now ranks second in popularity to John N. Garner as a 1940 candidate in case President Roosevelt does not run for a third term. While Garner is still far out in front, McNutt's popularity has increased four-fold in the six weeks since the Institute's last survey on the candidate preference of Democratic voters.

His rapid rise is an illustration of the effect which publicity and appointment to a prominent post with the blessing of the President can have on the popularity of a man in public life. It also indicates that public sentiment is by no means so fixed or crystallized regarding 1940 candidates that it is not highly sensitive to new developments.

In the Institute survey of Democrats six weeks ago, McNutt finished in fifth place. The situation today, as compared to that time, is shown below.

"If President Roosevelt is not a candidate in 1940, who would you like to see elected President?"

June
1. Garner	47%
2. Farley	16
3. Hull	13
4. Hopkins	5
5. McNutt	3
6. Wallace	3
7. Murphy	3
8. Clark	2
9. Barkley	1
10. Kennedy	1
All others	7

Today
1. Garner	46%
2. McNutt	13
3. Hull	12
4. Farley	12
5. Hopkins	3
6. Murphy	3
7. Barkley	1
8. Clark	1
9. Wallace	1
10. Stark	1
All others	7

The above comparison indicates that McNutt is the only man in the list whose position has changed sharply in the last six weeks. The vote for Garner remained almost the same, as did the vote for Hull. Farley's popularity declined a few points.

It remains a question whether McNutt's rapid rise will be sustained in the coming months, or whether it is merely a temporary fillip resulting from a great amount of publicity. Future monthly surveys on candidate preferences will show the trend.

Besides the ten leading choices in today's survey, the following Democrats received prominent mention by Democratic voters: Harold L. Ickes, Herbert H. Lehman, Joseph P. Kennedy, Burton Wheeler, Alfred E. Smith, Senator Harry Byrd, Robert Jackson, George Earle, Carter Glass, Jesse Jones, Claude Pepper, Owen D. Young, Senator Pat Harrison, Senator James Brynes, Senator Millard Tydings, Senator Joseph P. Guffey, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, John L. Lewis and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Garner Gets Chair for Campaign

Vice President Garner, who gave up sitting on his front porch at Uvalde several years ago because too many folks stopped by, had a new wicker chair last night to put on his favorite spot in the Garner back yard.

Senate friends of Garner presented the chair to him at luncheon yesterday, with the observation that he could use it in his "front porch" campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Garner's reply was said to have been that he would put it in the back yard under his oak trees.

House Closes Struggle Over Wage-Hour Act

Minor Change Which Exempts Rural Phone Operators Adopted

Adoption of one minor change in the wage-hour act yesterday brought to a close the bitter House struggle over drastic amendments to the law—until next year.

With announcement by Majority Leader Rayburn that the question would not be considered this session, one more major obstacle to adjournment was neatly hurdled.

Smarting from the latest Administration defeat on the housing bill, Rayburn took many members by surprise when he rose to announce that "the House does not at this time seem to be inclined to consider very much legislation, especially any legislation of far-reaching importance."

The Answer: No

"I have been asked I guess 50 times a day for the last week," he continued, "whether or not the so-called amendments to the wage-hour bill will be taken up for consideration during this session. The answer is: They will not."

Rayburn's announcement marked a negative victory for the Administration, as it was generally predicted that if the House were permitted to vote on the various sets of proposed wage-hour amendments, it would probably approve the Barden bill, least acceptable to the New Deal.

Prior to Rayburn's statement, a rectification of one of the wage-hour act's "hardship cases" slid through the House and was sent to the President. This amendment, sponsored by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, exempts rural telephone operators from the law.

Proponents of wide-spread agricultural exemptions, such as are included in the Barden bill, asserted yesterday they were content to let the whole question go over to next year. They said that minimum wage rates under the law will have jumped from 25 to 30 cents by the time Congress meets again in January and that this increase, scheduled to take place October 24, is likely to arouse such intense pressure among employers for amendments to the law that strength of the revisionists bloc in Congress will be greatly increased.

Barden Disappointed

Despite this reasoning, Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, sponsor of the drastic exemptions, appeared disappointed that the House will not have a chance to vote on his bill.

Barden charged Chairman Sabath, of the Rules Committee, with preventing the measure from reaching the floor "until it was obviously too late." He asserted that "as far as agriculture is concerned, sentiment is unanimous for amendments to the law right now."

Sen. King Calls D. C. Fair Trade Bill Dangerous

Although the District fair trade practices bill has gone over until next session, Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday let loose a blast at it in a 25-page minority report.

"In my opinion this legislation is as unnecessary as it is dangerous," Senator King said in the report. "It would effectively discourage efforts to improve the efficiency and to reduce the costs of our system of distributing trade marked goods from the producer to the consumer.

"It would raise prices and curtail purchasing power at a time when price reductions and increased purchasing power are essential to restore full business activity and employment. It would destroy a vital section of the anti-trust laws which are designed to protect our competitive system."

Senate Approves Diminishing Quota For Philippines

By the Associated Press

The Senate completed legislative action yesterday on a bill readjusting the economic relations between the United States and the Philippines prior to projected independence of the islands in 1948.

The chamber approved, without amendment, a House bill which establishes duty-free trade quotas to diminish 5 per cent annually, for Philippine cocoanut oil, embroidery, tobacco, and pearl buttons between now and 1946. It makes no provisions beyond the scheduled date of independence.

Under the previous law the four Philippine products would be assessed duty on a graduated scale increasing 5 per cent annually between 1941 and 1946.

Roosevelt Told Of Catholic U. Jubilee Plans

Mgrs. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, and Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, called on President Roosevelt yesterday and told him of plans for the university golden jubilee, November 12 and 13.

Mgr. Corrigan, on leaving the White House, said no formal invitation had been extended to the President, who as holder of an honorary degree from the university ranks as an alumnus.

The fiftieth anniversary celebration, Mgr. Corrigan pointed out, has been going on "quietly," through special lectures and the like, since last Columbus Day, October 12.

'Class War' Going on Now, Bridges Says

'Workers Being Shot,' Unionist Testifies In West Coast Hearing

San Francisco, Aug. 3 (AP).—Harry Bridges declared at his deportation hearing today a "class struggle" was underway in the United States and "workers are being shot down on picket lines all over the country."

Then, as the Australian-born C. I. O. labor leader stepped down from the stand he picked up a newspaper and pointed to bold headlines reading, "Troops Rush to Battle Zone—4 Shot in Strike."

The story was about Gov. Carr of Colorado proclaiming a state of insurrection existed in the Green Mountain dam strike zone after four union sympathizers were shot and wounded.

Bridges charged on the stand that Frank F. Merriam, former California Governor, "got $30,000" for calling out the national guard in the 1934 general strike here.

Asked to elaborate, he replied:

"Thirty thousand dollars was paid into his campaign fund by the ship owners."

Militia was called to patrol the waterfront here in July, 1934, after two days of rioting in which two men were killed and scores injured.

The Government is attempting to deport Bridges on the contention he is a Communist advocating overthrow of Government by violence. Bridges is head of West Coast maritime workers.

"Is there a class struggle?" Thomas B. Shoemaker, chief of the Government's counsel, asked the defendant.

"Very Definite"

"Very definite. On the one hand are the large corporate interests; on the other hand are the working people, the small business people and the small farmers and such as that."

Shoemaker inquired whether Bridges thought the struggle "can ever be amicably settled?"

The witness replied he thought if the employers would agree to "give a little," amicable settlement could be arranged.

"But when it comes to questions of the right to take over factories, that's something I've never gone into; something I know nothing about."

Asked whether he thought the "class struggle" situation would result in open hostility with bloodshed, Bridges answered:

"Certainly, it results in bloodshed, but the blood is usually ours."

"I mean, do you think it will eventually result in a class war which means gas, guns and bloodshed?" Shoemaker asked.

"I am not passing opinions," Bridges continued. "I am stating that right now workers are being shot down on picket lines all over the country. With the employers organized nationally, the weakness of the unions is that they are not organized nationally.

"Being Shot Down"

"I've never found any worker yet who found any pleasure in facing bayonets and tear gas. . . . Right now people are being shot down and not for revolutionary activities, but for picketing and for legitimate union aims. That's what I'm concerned about, not what's going to happen 30 or 40 years from now."

Bridges declared the small farmer had been virtually eliminated, and 90 per cent of the farms in California were owned by large banker-farmer corporations.

"It's not the labor unions that are hurting the corner grocery man and the drugstore man. When the workingmen get good wages, the small businessman prospers. The thing that is hurting them is the chain stores, chain drugstores and chain grocery stores, all open shop and nonunion . . . and cutting rates on the small businessman.

"When they succeed in monopolizing everything, I don't know what is to be the outcome . . . You'll have 30,000,000 people on relief. When it comes to feeding them, the employers will say it's none of their business.

"Well, its our business in the trade unions. The only thing I see to do now is to organize trade unions and we'll head off a little of it."

Bridges summarized his statements by saying:

"When the workers come to me for answers to their problems, I don't tell the workers to wait 30 years and we'll have a revolution. I've got to figure a way for them to get a couple of nickels more a day right now."

I. R. A. Chieftain Said to Have Entered England

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—Sean Russell, leader of the illegal Irish Republican Army, was refused entry into Britain today by the home office, but unofficial reports said he had already entered secretly and had been ordered arrested.

Russell was detained briefly by Federal officials at Detroit while King George and Queen Elizabeth were visiting the United States.

The home office issued expulsion orders today against four other persons suspected of connection with the I. R. A., making a total of 41 such orders since Parliament last week passed a new law to deal with terrorism. Three others, besides Russell, have been denied entry.

Dope Czar Taken From U.S. Jail To Hide Him Away From Lepke

Doctors Who Treated Fugitive Racket Chief in Nursing Homes to Be Called Before Federal Grand Jury in New York

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Aug. 3.—Yasha Katzenberg, so powerful and sinister a figure in the dope traffic that the League of Nations has called him "an international menace," was sneaked to a country hideaway tonight to save him from the vengeance of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter.

Katzenberg was already in the stone and steel Federal House of Detention serving a term for narcotics violations, but even that gun and gas guarded fortress was not considered strong enough to protect him after he agreed to testify against the hiding racket czar.

During the two years that Lepke, "public enemy No. 1" and continuing boss of garment, bakery and narcotics rackets, has been "on the lam," six men slated to testify against him have been slain. This campaign of extermination spread so wide that only last week a seventh man, who had no racket connections, but who happened to resemble a prospective Lepke witness, was murdered on the street in broad daylight.

Katzenberg, who was last captured in Greece, will be one of the early witnesses before the special Federal grand jury convening Monday to spread a net over the whole country's criminal haunts. Hundreds are expected to be caught in that net and officials hope that among them will be Lepke.

In the meantime Katzenberg is hidden away in "a Suffolk County jail" in the rolling pastoral country on the west side of the Hudson above New York City. Also to be questioned are half a dozen doctors and proprietors of city and suburban nursing homes where Lepke is known to have obtained treatment for a chronic liver ailment. From Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Cleveland, Detroit and other cities across the country suspicious characters will be brought in to explain their part in the underground railway which has permitted Lepke to move about the country without detection for two years.

The grand jurors will have access to a million page "encyclopedia of crime" collaborated on by G-men and police throughout the country.

As the investigation opens Monday the city is expected to raise its present $5,000 reward for Lepke to $25,000—dead or alive.

5-Year-Old Murder Studied

Meanwhile, at the office of District Attorney Dewey, Charles A. Schneider, former Tammany leader and assistant attorney general, was questioned in connection with the William Snyder murder five years ago in the flour-trucking racket, dominated by Lepke.

After the murder of Snyder, president of Local 138 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Schneider acted as counsel for Morris Goldis, suspected of the crime but released. When he became district attorney, Dewey reopened the case, and on July 1, 1938, Morris Goldis and his brother, William (Wolfie) Goldis, confessed and pleaded guilty to first-degree manslaughter.

Two others indicted with the brothers, Max Silverman and Samuel Schorr, pleaded not guilty and are in jail awaiting trial. Silverman is known as a close partner of Lepke and Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro in their industrial rackets, including the flour-trucking racket, in which Lepke and Gurrah have been indicted. Lepke and Gurrah have never been formally accused of the Snyder murder. They were not among the 14 men who said they all divided under the same small restaurant table when it happened. It is known, however, that Dewey's office feels that the slaying, a turning point in the history of the flour-trucking racket could not have happened without their consent.

Valentine Sends 50 Detectives

Dewey's office refused to comment on Schneider's visit. He was not placed under any restraint, although it appeared that the questioning was restricted to the Snyder killing. The possibility was not ruled out that it also touched on the activities of Lepke in general.

Schneider was criticized by Dewey in his campaign for district attorney in 1937 for acting as lawyer for a racketeer, Morris Goldis, while he was at the same time an assistant attorney general.

Police Commissioner Valentine and three other high-ranking police officers decided today to detail 50 detectives and patrolmen to do nothing but search for Lepke.

Palmer Widow Faces Charges

Sarasota, Fla., Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Honore Palmer, of Chicago, father of the late Potter D'Orsay Palmer, today petitioned County Probate Court to remove the playboy's widow as administratrix of the estate, charging her with wasting and failing to protect its assets.

The petition charged that Pluma Louise Palmer had given away books and other articles owned by young Palmer, who died after being involved in a barbecue brawl, had pawned two pistols and hidden a large amount of linens.

U. S. and Canada To Confer on Joint Air Lines

Another link in a co-operative chain between United States and Canadian-Great Britain air services is expected to be forged at a conference of United States and Canadian air officials at Ottawa August 9.

Agreements for reciprocal use of air routes by Canadian and American commercial planes, with mutual establishment of beacons, markers, air fields and emergency landing fields, are expected to be worked out.

But back of the commercial agreement is a feature that would give the United States Air Corps vital facilities for crossing Canada to the $10,000,000 air base authorized in Alaska by the present Congress.

Also the new agreement, if it works out as planned, will provide links for American and Canadian-English air mail and passenger service around the world, officials said last night.

Senate Votes New Locks for Panama Canal

Amendment Sends Bill Back to House, but Passage Is Held Certain

The Senate late yesterday passed legislation authorizing construction of an additional set of locks for the Panama Canal, to assure the vital artery will remain open for quick transit of the fleet in time of war.

An amendment sent the measure back to the House, but leaders predicted final passage before adjournment. The additional locks would cost an estimated $277,000,000—nearly equaling the original cost of the canal—and would take six years to build. Fifteen millions would be spent next year, under terms of the measure.

Practically Bomb-Proof

Recommended by Secretary of War Woodring as necessary for the defense of the Canal, the new locks would be larger than the existing two sets, and would be capable of handling the world's mightiest warships and commercial vessels. Especially designed to be practically bomb-proof, the locks would be constructed at some distance from the existing ones, as an additional safeguard against aerial raids.

The Senate also passed and sent to the White House a bill to permit the executive departments to carry out reciprocal economic, cultural and other undertakings with Latin-American states.

The co-operative program, outlined in a report of an interdepartmental committee submitted to Congress in April, includes 74 separate projects. One would be a survey to determine what products South and Central American nations might produce and sell to the United States without competing with domestic goods. Approximately $1,000,000 would be spent the first year under the program.

Arms Aid Blocked

At the same time, action was blocked in the Senate on another hemisphere solidarity bill—the Administration's proposal to manufacture warships and munitions in American arsenals at cost for Latin-American states. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, objected to consideration of the House-approved measure, when bills were called up under rules permitting a single objection to prevent passage.

Vandenberg said he objected to "any legislation that makes America an arms huckster for other nations." Administration officials had proposed the plan to counteract reported efforts of Europe's totalitarian states to get a foothold in Latin America with "cut-rate" munitions.

The Senate amendment to the Panama Canal bill requires that all "skilled, technical, clerical, administrative and supervisory" employes in the construction be American citizens. The new locks would be reserved for use of the Navy in an emergency.

Flood Maroons 500 Children

Redlands, Calif., Aug. 3 (AP).—Five hundred children, quartered in summer camps in the San Bernardino Mountains, were marooned tonight by flood waters that followed a heavy rain.

The children were believed safe, but anxious parents in Pasadena, Los Angeles, Glendale and Orange County cities were unable to reach them because bridges were washed away and roads were clogged with debris.

Reported Lynch Victim Is Found at His Job

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 3 (AP).—A 33-year-old colored man, Charlie Williams, whom the Tuskegee Institute listed in its semi-annual report as having been lynched at Woodcliffe, Ga., March 11, was discovered working at a fertilizer plant here today.

Detective Sergt. E. A. Fitzgerald, who found Williams, said the man told him, "I heard I was lynched but didn't pay any attention to it 'cause I knew I was living."

On Capitol Hill

Senator Lucas (Democrat, Illinois), praising the Administration's reciprocal tariff policy told the Senate yesterday that "we can not shut ourselves up like hermits and expect to have adequate market outlets for our great surplus-producing capacity.

SEN. LUCAS

Lucas, in a 10,000-word address, asserted that a "small but vociferous group of people" is seeking to stir up opposition to the program.

He added:

"I think that every farmer will do well to ask himself sincerely and honestly if, in view of the advances that have been made under the present program, he would wish once more to entrust himself to the loving and tender care of the embargo tariff devotees whose record is one of total collapse in their final days of unstable and tottering power."

The Senate passed a measure broadening and continuing the municipal bankruptcy act, which permits municipalities to file voluntary petitions in bankruptcy upon consent of creditors holding 51 per cent of municipal obligations. The bill would continue the act from June 30, 1940, to June 30, 1942, and would make it applicable to counties and parishes.

The bill now goes back to the House for action on Senate amendments.

Approval was given by the Senate for a conference report on legislation to complete the British-American barter transaction under which the United States will trade 600,000 bales of cotton for British rubber.

The most important amendment adopted would permit American delivery of the cotton at storage points in the interior as well as seaports.

Since the amendment was originally inserted by the House, it was expected that body would send the measure to President Roosevelt.

The Senate sent to the White House a bill which would give Spanish-American War veterans an advance in the rank at which they were retired from the Army. This advance covered all grades up to the advancement of colonels to the rank of brigadier generals, but involved virtually no increases in pensions.

The House approved a resolution authorizing a House Interstate Commerce sub-committee to conduct a $15,000 investigation of the petroleum industry. A similar survey of production and economic conditions in the oil industry was made by the committee in 1934.

Cerreta Seeks Hearing On Sentence Expiration

James Cerreta, 35, who claims his sentence for larceny has legally expired, asked the Court of Appeals yesterday to compel Justice Goldsborough to hear his plea for a writ of habeas corpus without delay. The hearing was postponed by Justice Morris.

Wage-Hour Advisers Urge Rises for 60,000 Shoe Workers

Nashville Employer Member of Committee Quits in Protest at 35-Cent Minimum; Charges Law Favors Large Manufacturer

By the United Press

The Wage-Hour Administration's shoe industry committee last night unanimously recommended wage increases for 60,000 of the industry's 234,000 employes after one of the Southern employer members had resigned in protest against the committee action.

The committee recommended that Administrator Elmer F. Andrews fix a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour.

The vote was made unanimous after labor representative motions for a 40 or 37½ cents an hour minimum lost because they lacked one vote of a necessary 14 for a majority.

George Noland, Nashville, Tenn., vice president of the General Shoe Corporation, quit the committee after his motion for a 32½-cent minimum was rejected, 16 to 10. He charged that the committee and Andrews were moving too quickly and criticized statistical data presented the committee to aid it in agreeing on a wage recommendation.

Mgr. Francis J. Haas, of Catholic University, committee chairman, said that the recommendation "will mean no national net curtailment of employment and will not cause serious dislocations in the industry as it is now carried on."

Andrews can either accept or reject the recommendation after a public hearing. However, he is not authorized to modify it.

The committee recommended that, if it is adopted, the higher minimum not become effective until the shoe season beginning in May, 1940.

The present national minimum in the shoe industry is 25 cents an hour and this automatically increases to 30 cents an hour next October 24.

The goal of the wage-hour act is a universal floor of 40 cents an hour by October 24, 1945.

Noland said his resignation was "a protest in the interest of the small manufacturer whose business I am afraid may be forced to close."

He charged that the wage-hour law favors large manufacturers over small competitors, and asserted that Andrews' administration added to this fault.

He predicted that "the effort of the administrator to do in six or eight months what Congress allowed six years to accomplish" would result in major Congressional changes in the present act.

Noland charged that statistics gathered for the committee were inadequate and "misleading."

Coast Guard Gets Day Off on 149th Birthday

300 to Celebrate Here Today; Waesche To Be Guest at Fair

Coast Guard vessels, wherever stationed, will "dress ship" today as officers and men take a holiday to celebrate the 149th anniversary of the service.

Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the "Treasury Navy," will be guest of honor at the New York World's Fair during ceremonies dedicated to the Coast Guard and its achieveements.

Nearly 300 members of the headquarters force here will join in the celebration and "all who can be spared" will have the day off.

In anniversary greetings to the service, Admiral Waesche declared, "Ours is a service full of tradition—which is enriched by a long and honorable record of public service—dedicated to the safety of those who go down to the sea in ships—and still further enriched by the splendid traditions of the Lighthouse Service, which is one year older than the Coast Guard.

"Commend Every Officer"

"It is my happy privilege to commend every officer, man and civilian employe for their efforts—so unselfishly given—in gaining for this—our service—the enviable place it now enjoys in the vast setup of important Government activities."

Founded by Alexander Hamilton shortly after the first Congress passed the original tariff act, the Coast Guard has played a prominent part in the enforcement of United States maratime laws. It also has participated in every war in which the Nation has engaged.

During the conflict with France of 1798-1800, eight cutters served with the newly organized Navy on the Atlantic and in the West Indies. Of the 22 prizes captured during the two years of desultory warfare, 18 were taken by cutters and two others were compelled to strike their flags after engagements in which cutters participated.

The cutter Pickering, while cruising in West Indian waters, captured a 44-gun ship with a crew of 200 men—Nearly three times its own force.

In the War of 1812, cutters engaged in several engagements with British ships. In one battle, guns from the cutter Eagle were removed to a high bluff on Long Island and the crew, from that position, engaged in a day-long battle with two British ships.

The service in the early days carried on a continuous crusade against pirates. An unceasing struggle with smugglers is still under way. Its cutters have been used in peace and war as dispatch boats for the Federal Government and in campaigns against hostile Indians.

Five cutters engaged in naval operations during the War with Mexico and participated in the attacks on Alvarado and Tabasco. They also engaged in blockading activities off the coast of Mexico in the struggle.

The Revenue Cutter Service, as it was called, participated in the Civil War, both in engagements and blockade duty. Cutters were on hand in attacks on Fort Hatteras, in reconnaissance of batteries at Norfolk, in the bombardment of Drury's Bluff on the James River and in operations in lower Chesapeake Bay.

On the evening of January 15, 1861, when the internal conflict was brewing, Secretary of the Treasury John A. Dix sent his famous order to subordinates in New Orleans to retain control of the cutter, Robert McLelland, then in port.

"If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot," was Dix' order.

Became Part of Navy

Ships of the Coast Guard served in sea engagements off the coast of Cuba and at the battles of Santiago and Manila Bay in the Spanish-American War.

When the United States entered the World War, the service, in accordance with law, became a part of the Navy and cutters, officers and men served in escort duty both in the transatlantic service and between the British Isles and Mediterranean ports.

After the Armistice, several Coast Guard officers were on duty as commanders of transports bringing the American armies home from France.

The present Coast Guard fleet consists of 34 cutters, 116 patrol boats, 52 harbor craft, 39 picket boats and 7 special craft. In the aviation wing are 10 air stations and 63 planes. Shore establishments include 197 active stations, 35 inactive stations and 3 houses of refuge.

Principal training facilities are the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., for the education of officers for the service, three Maritime Service stations and the Coast Guard Institute. In addition, there are depots for construction and repair of boats and vessels, radio stations, stores and bases to assist in saving survivors of vessels wrecked on the coasts of the United States or at sea.

Ships of the service are detailed each year on iceberg patrol to protect passenger vessels and freighters from accidents such as the sinking of the Titanic in April, 1912, after striking an iceberg.

New Indictments Forecast in Louisiana Probe

New Orleans, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Reports of impending new indictments against persons high in Louisiana politics gained circulation tonight as the Federal grand jury recessed for the week-end.

Yesterday and again today the grand jurors, investigating vice and corruption in the regime left by Huey Long, grilled witnesses past regular closing time. Identification of those witnesses was barred by court order.

New 'Roll' Dance To Rout 'Jitter,' D. C. Expert Says

This was the prospect seen yesterday by Leroy H. Thayer, of Washington, in describing a new dance step, the Castle Rock and Roll," performed by Irene Castle, at the 56th convention of the Dancing Masters of America in New York.

The new dance is made up of three steps, named "Rock and Roll," "Kick the Bucket" and "Banking the Turn."

WJSV Contract Let for Building

Two firms, one of Washington, have been awarded contracts totaling $87,257 for construction work in the third of a million dollar radio project at Wheaton, Md., to be climaxed this year when Radio Station WJSV increases its power to 50,000 watts.

The work centers about construction on the building to house WJSV's modern broadcast transmitter. The George Martin Construction Co., of Washington, received the contract for the construction of the building, which will house the new transmitter. The sum was $53,600. The Blaw-Knox Co., of Pittsburgh, will build the three guyed towers, each 340 feet high. This contract was for $33,657.

Two Generals, Four Colonels Are Promoted

Joyce, Grunert Named Major Generals; Miles, Magruder Nominated

President Roosevelt nominated four to the rank of brigadier general and two brigadier generals to major generals yesterday as retirements brought a reshuffling of the high military command.

Two Cavalrymen, Brig. Gen. Kenyon A. Joyce and Brig. Gen. George Grunert, the former a one-time commander of Fort Myer, Va., were selected for advancement to major generals. Joyce will fill a vacancy resulting from the retirement of Maj. Gen. Robert McC. Beck, jr., October 31, on his own application, while Grunert will succeed Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, retiring for age November 30.

Four colonels were named for promotion to brigadier general. Two of them are natives of Washington—Col. Bruce Magruder and Col. Sherman Miles, the latter the son of the late Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commander of the Army at the turn of the century.

Stilwell and Fredendall

Col. Joseph W. Stilwell, military attache to China from 1932 until last May, and Col. Lloyd R. Fredendall, executive officer to the chief of Infantry here, also were nominated for brigadier general.

Stilwell fills a vacany resulting from the retirement of Brig. Gen. Charles M. Bundel last month, and Miles will be promoted, September 1, when Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall becomes chief of staff. Magruder advances November 1, and Fredendall on December 1, when Joyce and Grunert are promoted.

The appointments were the first since General Marshall became acting chief of staff. Officers noted that the advances apparently followed the policy laid down during General Malin Craig's regime of picking younger men for the high command. Both Joyce and Grunert are 59, while all of the new brigadiers are 56, except Fredendall, who is a year younger.

Three Were Enlisted Men

Three of the new generals were formerly enlisted men, both Gens. Joyce and Grunert serving in the ranks during the Spanish-American War, and Col. Magruder serving three years as an enlisted man before being commissioned in 1907. Stilwell and Miles are West Pointers, while Fredendall entered the Army from civilian life.

Gen. Joyce was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was with the Illinois Volunteer Infantry and the Third Cavalry during the Spanish War and Philippine Insurrection. After being commissioned in 1901, he joined the Sixth Cavalry in the Philippines. During the World War he was attached to the Thirty-seventh British Division and the Fifty-fifth French Division, seeing action in the Ypres Salient. Later he was with the Seventy-seventh and Eighty-third American divisions during the Meuse-Argonne and Le Mans offensives.

Gen. Joyce now commands the First Cavalry Division at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Gen. Grunert is a Pennsylvanian. In the World War he was personnel officer for the First American Corps, and for a time was at A. E. F. headquarters. From 1932 to 1936, he was on the staff of the Army War College, and then commanded a regiment and a brigade in the Philippines. He now heads the First Infantry Brigade at Vancouver Barracks, Wash.

A native of Florida, Col. Stilwell entered the Army in 1900. He was assigned to military intelligence overseas duty in the World War. Before going to China seven years ago, he had two previous assignments in the Orient.

Miles Had Intelligence Duty

Col. Miles was military attache to Rumania, Bulgaria and Russia during the first two years of the World War, and after America entered the conflict he held various intelligence posts in France. He now commands the Fourth Field Artillery Brigade at Fort Sill, Okla.

The first military service of Col. Magruder was with the District National Guard in 1903-04. His record includes service on the Mexican border in 1916 and in France from 1917 to 1919. Before reporting for his present assignment as executive officer of the Infantry School, Col. Magruder commanded the Sixty-sixth Light Tank Regiment at Fort Meade, Md.

Col. Fredendall was born in Wyoming and was appointed a lieutenant of Infantry in 1907. In the World War he held several important training posts overseas. Before coming to Washington last year, he commanded the Fifty-seventh Infantry in the Philippines.

Smithsonian Given HawaiianBoat Mat

A royal Hawaiian boat mat, a buffalo-hide shield of the Sioux Indians and weapons of the Moros of the Philippines and the Aleuts of Alaska have been presented to the Smithsonian Institution, it was announced yesterday.

Kamehameha, who conquered the Hawaiian archipeligo and set up an independent knigdom, presented the mat to Capt. Theodore Glover, a trader. It was given to the Smithsonian by Mrs. William S. Carroll, a descendant of Capt. Glover.

The shield was given by Brig. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, former commandant of Fort Myer, who inherited it from his father. Gen. Wainwright's father obtained it in 1890 at the Battle of Wounded Knee, last military engagement between the Army and the Indians.

The weapons and hunting implements of the Aleuts were gathered a generation ago by Gustave Neibaum, a trader, and were presented to the Smithsonian by J. D. Wall and Suzanne Wall.

The Moro weapons and other primitive tools, collected in western Mindanao, Philippine Islands, were given by Lieut. Col. G. E. Brower, of the Army Air Corps.

Jasper Legion Post Supports Work of USHA

Support for the slum clearance and low-cost housing activities of the United States Housing Authority was voted Wednesday by Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, of the American Legion, in a resolution commending the Federal agency's "fair distribution of the benefits of this program, without regard to section, creed, race, origin or color among our citizens."

The resolution also pointed out that 38 States and 200 cities and counties are engaged in housing programs supervised by the authority.

Copies were ordered sent to the department convention, to be held next Thursday, for approval and transmission to President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhaed, Nathan Straus, administrator of the USHA, and the Rules Commmittee of the House.

Trust Fund Cow Expires at 29

Bath, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—"Queen Victoria," the Holstein cow with a $700 trust fund, is dead—at 29.

Believed by her owner to have been the oldest cow in the United States, the animal received her name because she was born on the British Queen's birthday. Several years ago the owner, Miss Idah M. W. Vanhousen, established the trust fund to provide for its care.

Operator Sought After Fake S O S Stirs Sea Search

Miami, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—Convinced they had been hoaxed, Federal officials started a State-wide search today for the operator who loaded radio channels with distress signals through a hectic seven hours last night.

In answer to a stream of erratic messages, the Coast Guard and private shipping vainly searched the Atlantic off southeast Florida by air and water, seeking a British tanker reported afire and sinking.

First doubt arose after the unknown operator had said his ship was the tanker Dunkwa and Lloyd's of London reported the Dunkwa safe in port at Rotterdam.

Further discrepancies in the calls—supposedly sent by a ship's officer after the radio operator was hurt badly—were noted soon, but the Coast Guard didn't immediately abandon its costly search.

Flood Destroys German Forts, French Report

Doctored Cement Used, 30 Siegfried Line Men Seized, Metz Hears

By the United Press.

Metz, France, Aug. 3.—A 3-mile stretch of Germany's new Siegfried Line of fortifications along the Rhine was reported flooded tonight after heavy rains, driving troops to rear-line positions and leading to sabotage charges against 30 engineers and contractors.

The reports, which lacked confirmation from German authorities, said the engineers and contractors had been arrested by agents of the Nazi Gestapo (secret police) on charges of using adulterated cement which caused the sunken forts to collapse under pressure of Rhine flood waters.

Nine workers of the Nazi labor front who have been building the Siegfried "west wall" escaped to Luxembourg during the day by swimming the Sure River under a hail of bullets from the German side, where machine-gun nests are being constructed.

The forts reported inundated by three days of heavy rain are opposite the French military bases of Strasbourg and Lauterbourg and are about 200 to 300 yards from the Rhine, within view of the French side of the frontier. The forts are at intervals of about 650 yards.

The engineers and contractors under arrest on charges of "systematic sabotage" were described as residents of the Rhineland and the Saar. They are being held in Landau, Trier and Coblenz, it was said.

Some reports said that the arrested men, instead of intentionally sabotaging the Siegfried works, held back quantities of cement to use later for private construction work. The contractors allegedly loaded the cement on their own trucks, which they sent to their own depots instead of into the fortifications.

Frontier sources also reported that the German government had revived wartime "kitchen committees" to end complaints among the 250,000 workers on the Siegfried line who had complained that they were given inadequate food after working 12 to 15 hours a day. The new committees were said to have organized the workers' kitchens on a regional basis so that the workers could have "home" cooking.

Baby Is Sought In Adoption Case

Riverdale, Md., to get Barbara Alicia back through a writ of habeas corpus.

The Thornes said that when their baby was born four months ago they were destitute. They accepted Mrs. Grover's offer to care for the baby, they said, and signed papers which they did not understand. When they went to Mrs. Grover's home, 3813 Jocelyn street northwest, to get the child, they charge, they were told that their baby had been adopted by authority of a consent they had signed.

Mrs. Grover filed an answer yesterday saying the child is no longer in Washington, but was taken on May 9, four days after she got it, by a prosperous couple. The foster parents later were disclosed to be Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tilt, jr., of Greenwich, Conn.

"This answer in itself constitutes contempt of court," Justice Goldsborough said, "and the counsel who prepared it also are in contempt. The court is not going any further today."

Attorney Homer L. McCormick, who appeared with Clair Stout for Mrs. Grover, tried to interrupt, but Goldsborough continued, "I hope she knows the seriousness of the position she is in."

The justice called Mrs. Grover's answer an attempt to evade the habeas corpus writ, because she did not tell what she did with the baby, who had it or where it was.

Judge Admits "Mistake"

McCormick handed the court a letter, written by Mrs. Grover to Tilt day before yesterday, in which she told of the habeas corpus action and asked the Tilts to help her produce the baby.

McCormick said Mrs. Grover did not think the names of the foster parents ought to be revealed in open court. Justice Goldsborough replied, "that's not her responsibility," and read the letter aloud.

The judge then said he had been mistaken when he declared Mrs. Grover in contempt of court.

However, Justice Goldsborough refused to hear any part of the case until the child was before him.

Mrs. Grover's practice of routing babies from parents to persons who wished to adopt them was revealed Wednesday in a hearing on custody of 5-year-old Ramona Perna, whose foster mother got her from Mrs. Grover. Justice Goldsborough ruled against efforts of the Board of Public Welfare to take the girl from Mrs. Perna.

Mrs. Grover testified that she arranged this and other adoptions and collected expense money. She claimed that she supervised the children in their new homes.

Justice Goldsborough did not mention Mrs. Grover's previous appearance yesterday, but he said, "the court has nothing to do with the business she engages in as long as the law allows her to do it. But when she takes the position that she is all-wise, and that she can decide a matter which the law says should be decided by the court, she is not protected by any law anywhere, any time."

The Associated Press reported last night that the Tilts, in Greenwich, had refused to discuss the case.

Troops Take Over Dam Site From Strikers and Deputies

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

National Guardsmen at Golden, Colo., mount machine guns on one of two tanks sent at dawn yesterday to the scene of strike disorders at the Green Mountain Dam site

By the Associated Press.

Green Mountain Dam, Colo., Aug. 3.—Colorado National Guardsmen occupied the strife-torn Green Mountain Dam project today and disarmed about 200 special deputies.

The guard commander immediately authorized resumption of work at the job, center of a strike battle in which six men were shot and a seventh cut.

The men, deputized by a county sheriff and part of a "back to work" force that pushed through union picket lines Tuesday night in the start of turmoil at the $4,000,000 Reclamation Bureau project, quietly surrendered their deer and .22 rifles, shotguns and pistols.

No Discrimination

Before the troopers finished taking up the guns, Adjt. Gen. Harold H. Richardson, guard commander, said work would be resumed as soon as possible on the Federal irrigation and power project. A strike of five American Federation of Labor unions halted operations July 12.

"Any man who wants to can go back to work," declared Gen. Richardson.

A. K. Anderson, project superintendent for the Warner Construction Co., opened the camp employment office and men streamed by in a line to register for jobs.

A large number of men who were strikers were in the line, Anderson declared. He asserted there would be no discrimination against strikers.

"They all look alike to me, just so they can do a day's work," he said.

Pickets Cheer Guard

The guardsmen, called out after Gov. Ralph L. Carr declared a "state of insurrection" following two major shooting frays last night, advanced to the project from Kremmling, 18 miles northwest.

Anderson said it would be several days before work would be in full swing at the dam, which employed 350 men when the strike was called.

"Most of these boys are all fagged out. They haven't slept for two or three nights," he said.

About 50 union pickets cheered and tossed hats in the air when the guard column, headed by a high-speed tank, reached the strike sympathizers camp, 2 miles outside the $4,000,000 Federal Reclamation Bureau project.

Gen. Richardson stopped his 12-truck column at the picket camp and walked up to talk to the group.

He was surrounded by whooping men who reached out to grasp his hand and pound him on the back.

The 50 were all that remained of approximately 500 unionists who gathered yesterday to back the strike.

Spokesmen poured out grievances to Gen. Richardson.

"There is no person who wouldn't say this was the most peaceable strike we have seen until those people started shooting on us," one unionist declared.

"How do you want to go out?" Gen. Richardson asked, after most indicated their eagerness to leave.

"Any old way," several shouted.

"You men just sit down and wait and we'll be back to take you out," Gen. Richardson said.

Gov. Carr was expected at the project to make a personal inspection.

arose, while she was his stenographer, "a mutual infatuation."

He refused to fix responsibility for this, saying:

"The court believes that as in most love affairs, both the parties were responsible."

Branson declared Madeline sought to break his home and therefore could not go into court "with clean hands."

"There is no finding in this case," Branson argued, "except that the plaintiff for seven years, by word, act and lascivious conduct with the defendant, drove a wedge that never existed before that split wide open a home.

"This defendant is asking the courts of this State whether a younger, a more lascivious woman can cross the threshold of a home because she is in his office and through the weakness of the defendant—no matter how culpable he may be—to break up a home.

"Can such a woman, who cannot come into a court of chancery with clean hands, get alimony and money to live in luxury?

"She used the weapon of sex to drive a faithful, now gray-haired, woman (his first wife, Eula J. Branson, Muskogee, Okla.) into the divorce court—the weapon that has been used by woman ever since Adam fell in the Garden of Eden."

In closing arguments, Madeline's attorney said he restrained himself from "calling a spade a spade" and charged Branson's wealth could not be traced because of lack of time.

High Japanese Held Decided On Joining Axis

Envoys to Berlin, Rome Reported in Talks to Prepare Armed Alliance

By International News Service

London, Aug. 3.—Three of Japan's highest leaders were believed to have decided at a conference today to attempt expediting a military alliance with Germany and Italy, it was stated tonight in a Tokyo dispatch to the Daily Telegraph.

The three men who conferred on the matter were Prince Kanin, uncle of Emperor Hirohito; Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, minister for war, and Gen. Ikudo Nishio, inspector general of the army.

There were reports from the Continent that the Japanese Ambassadors in Berlin and Rome were engaged in talks designed to pave the way for Japan to join the Italo-German military alliance concluded last May. These reports were not officially confirmed.

Army and nationalistic circles in Japan renewed and intensified their pressure for a formal military treaty with the Rome-Berlin axis after the announcement of formal general staff consultations to open shortly in Moscow among Britain, France and Russia.

The American denunciation of the American-Japanese trade treaty was said to have provided these circles with additional fuel for their contention that Japan must definitely link up her war machine with those of Hitler and Mussolini.

Japan already is a partner of Germany and Italy in the anti-Communist political and cultural pact. It is known that Germany for many months has been trying to obtain Japan's adherence to a Rome-Berlin military axis. Last April the Japanese government considered the German proposals and decided to turn them down in order to avoid becoming embroiled in Europe while the war in China is in progress.

Gov. Dickinson Expresses Dislike Of Jitterbugging

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 3 (AP).—Gov. Luren D. Dickinson came here today for a picnic of pioneers, watched with pleasure some old-fashion dancing and expressed a dislike for jitterbugging and "that hugging kind of stuff we have today."

The Governor remarked that in his youth the Virginia reel was his favorite.

The 80-year-old executive and critic of modern "high life" was given an enthusiastic reception by hundreds of pioneer residents of this area and was cheered as he headed a parade held in connection with the picnic.

Don't Take War Threat Lightly, British Warned

Halifax Cautious, But Inskip Declares Conflict Is Unlikely

Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 3.—A few hours after Dominion Secretary Sir Thomas Inskip had declared bluntly that war was not only not inevitable, but "unlikely," Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax said in the House of Lords tonight that he could not "encourage anyone to feel complacent about the situation in which the world finds itself."

Complacency, according to Lord Halifax, would not be "in accordance with the facts and the possibilities as I see them today; indeed, it may well be that the next few weeks or months may prove critical."

Lord Halifax also took occasion to warn Japan that if it failed to suppress anti-British agitation in those regions of China under Tokyo's control, "no negotiations or discussions," such as are now in progress about the Tientsin dispute "could prevent the relations between the two countries from growing steadily more difficult, with all the consequences that deterioration must inevitably bring."

Then, reaffirming the British government's pledge to help Poland resist any German aggression in the Free City of Danzig, Lord Halifax said the government was watching the Danzig situation "closely and carefully, and was fully alive to the possible repercussions and conditions in that quarter upon the future of European peace."

Diplomatic observers in London commented on the contrast between Inskip's bland optimism, coupled with the announcement tonight that Prime Minister Chamberlain would leave London next week for a fishing vacation in Scotland, and Halifax's more gloomy survey of the international scene.

"War Is Unlikely"

Inskip, speaking at a garden party at Oban, Scotland, did not disclose the basis for his cheerfulness, beyond saying that he had "good reasons" for his observations.

"It was stated last August to members of the government that war was not inevitable," he said, "but I would go further than that and say that war is not only not inevitable, but it is unlikely."

Chamberlain's holiday plans provide for his return to Whitehall about the third week in August, although he will be able to hurry back within a few hours by airplane, should an emergency arise. Immediately Parliament adjourns tomorrow afternoon, Chamberlain and his wife will leave London for their country retreat at Chequers, where they will remain for a day or two before going north.

Lord Halifax's warning to Japan in the upper house tonight was more vigorous than any issue so far by the British government, and reflected Whitehall's disillusion as to the failure of the highly touted Anglo-Japanese "formula" to achieve cessation of anti-British outbreaks at Tientsin and elsewhere.

Won't "Disregard Obligations"

After advising Tokyo to revise its present policy, Lord Halifax said the British government had no intention of disregarding its interests in China or of "disregarding our obligations to third powers" interested in China, such as the United States.

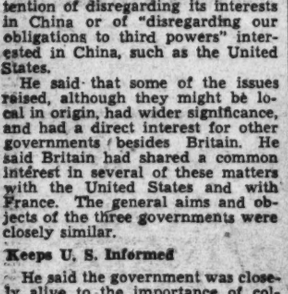
He said that some of the issues raised, although they might be local in origin, had wider significance, and had a direct interest for other governments besides Britain. He said Britain had shared a common interest in several of these matters with the United States and with France. The general aims and objects of the three governments were closely similar.

Keeps U. S. Informed

He said the government was closely alive to the importance of collaboration with these governments "wherever it was possible," and had never failed to keep them closely informed of both British intentions and actions. But this was not to say that they all necessarily did the same thing in the same way and at the same time. The recent denunciation of the commercial treaty by the United States was a case in point.

"I can well conceive the circumstance," he continued, "in which His Majesty's government also might wish to give notice of their intention to denounce the commercial treaty, but as the prime minister has said, that is a matter which would require most careful consideration, and in regard to which close exchange of views with our dominions would be necessary."

"The government has more than once made plain to the Japanese government that while we have never concealed our views about their action in China . . . we also have been fully prepared to recognize the special interest and position of Japan, by virtue of the geographical and economic needs she is entitled to claim and exercise."



Speaking of going down, take a look at the new low prices on the used cars listed in the classified section of today's Post. They're real bargains and the big trade-in allowances and liberal terms will surprise you. Turn to

Russia Assigns Highest Army Chiefs to Talks With the Anglo-French War Mission

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 3.—The Soviet government tonight named its five highest military leaders, including War Commissar Klementi E. Voroshilov, to confer with the Anglo-French defense missions arriving at Leningrad Wednesday to discuss co-ordination of the three powers' armies, navies and air forces.

The British and French missions—19 Britons and 10 Frenchmen—will sail from England Saturday aboard the British liner City of Exeter in order to avoid crossing Germany by rail or air and to insure secrecy.

Arriving in Leningrad Wednesday, the Anglo-French missions will entrain immediately for Moscow.

Disclosure tonight that Voroshilov will head the Soviet negotiators indicated the serious view which Moscow takes of the talks designed to pave the way for a general tripower alliance and divide the responsibilities of the three powers' fighting forces for any war against totalitarian aggression in Europe.

British Ambassador Sir William Seeds and French Ambassador Paul Naggiar who, with William Strang, of the British foreign office, met Wednesday at the Kremlin with Premier Molotzoff, were understood to have reported to Paris and London that Russia will not sign pacts of any kind until the general staff officers work out a detailed plan of collaboration in defense.

Danzig Business Situation Acute

Warsaw, Aug. 3 (AP).—Authoritative Polish quarters said tonight the business and industrial situation in Danzig was becoming "more and more acute."

Moreover, they added that Poland's "economic reprisals" now in effect against the free city would be continued until Polish customs officials were permitted to perform their duties there.

Persistent rumors that Danzig authorities were preparing to open the frontier between the free city and Germany's East Prussia drew the comment that "any such action would result in severe consequences."

Burgos Admits Wide Dissension in Spain

Burgos, Spain, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Existence of an extensive republican espionage and counter-revolutionary organization in Spain was admitted officially today in an announcement of the assassination of a major of the civil guard, allegedly by "Negrin terrorists."

The terrorists, described as supporters of Dr. Juan Negrin, who was last premier of Republican Spain, were said to be attempting to take advantage of Gen. Franco's peacetime reorganization to stir up dissension and disorders.

Japanese May Open Anti-U. S. Drive in China

Shanghai, Aug. 3 (AP).—Japanese-sponsored demonstrations in North China, though nominally directed against the British, today assumed a more general antiforeign tinge with exhortations for Asiatics to drive all whites out of the east.

Tsingtao dispatches reported a meeting of Chinese businessmen had been called for August 10 in that Japanese-controlled seaport to consider a resolution denouncing American abrogation of the United States-Japanese 1911 trade treaty.

Informed persons in Tsingtao believed this might be the opening gun of an anti-American campaign. Expression of such sentiment thus far has been limited to somewhat unfriendly editorials in Japanese-controlled newspapers in Shanghai and Peiping.

Fund for Civil Liberty Probe Approved

Senate Committee Favors $50,000 for West Coast Inquiry

By the Associated Press

Proposals for an investigation of labor conditions on the Pacific Coast and a study of the National monetary and banking policy were approved by the Senate Audit and Control Committee yesterday and sent to an uncertain fate in the Senate itself.

The committee approved $50,000 to finance the West Coast labor inquiry, which would be conducted by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, and $25,000 for the proposed monetary study by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

At the same time it served notice on advocates of these inquiries that they must fight their own battles on the Senate floor. Usually Chairman Byrnes (Democrat, South Carolina), of the Audit and Control Committee, brings in such resolutions and obtains immediate action on them.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat, Washington), who with Senator Downey (Democrat, California), sought $100,000 for the Civil Liberties investigation, told reporters the adjournment rush would make it difficult to obtain action.

"But you can be sure there will be a definite and vigorous fight for these funds," he added.

Previously the Civil Liberties Committee—composed of Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, of the Senate Labor Committee—had promised to wind up its long inquiry into labor disputes.

The Senate voted the committee $50,000 for this purpose in May, 1938, in addition to previous grants of $90,000 for investigations that started more than three years ago.

Schwellenbach said the agreement to conclude the inquiry was made before demands for the West Coast investigation developed, and added that these demands revealed "a nest of charges and counter charges of violation of civil rights by both sides."

The Audit Committee reduced from $100,000 to $25,000 funds to finance the proposed monetary study.

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, of the Banking Committee, asked the study to "consider and recommend a national monetary and banking policy by which the monetary and banking authorities of the Federal Government shall be guided and governed."

The Audit Committee also recommended $10,000 to enable the Senate Immigration Committee to make a study of aliens in this country, and the operation of the immigration laws. Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, asked $40,000 for this inquiry.

Western Gamblers Timid in Defeat

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Two florid-faced Western gamblers who took their dupes for millions in the heyday of a Reno, Nev., bunco ring, cashed in their chips today with wry expressions of defeat.

Far from the tradition of steely-eyed gamblers taking their losses with a philosophic shrug, William J. Graham and James C. McKay gulped and jumped up like schoolboys, nervously fingering their neckties, when they were called up to surrender before Federal Judge John C. Knox.

"That's us," Graham whispered, when their names were called.

Same Man Ghosts For Davis, Dewey

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Dixie Davis, the racketeer lawyer, and Thomas E. Dewey, the district attorney who sent him to jail, have used the same ghost writer.

Hickman Powell, newspaperman, free lance writer and member of Dewey's campaign staff, was disclosed today as the author of a current series of racket exposes appearing under Davis' name in Collier's Weekly. In Dewey's 1937 campaign for district attorney and 1938 race for Governor, Powell aided the district attorney in the preparation of speeches.

French Quarter Of New Orleans To Be Preserved

New Orleans, Aug. 3 (AP).—Judge William H. Byrnes, jr., doing some fast multiplying today, figured the old French quarter of the city was worth some $625,000,000 annually in tourist trade and refused to permit destruction of ancient buildings.

The judge said $25,000,000 was brought into the city yearly by tourists largely attracted by the Vieux Carre, the fancy name for the quarter.

11,571 Climbed Up Monument In Spite of Last Month's Heat

123,127 Rode to Top of Washington Shaft, and Combined Total Ranks Second Only to July Scouts Were Here

All this talk about Washington heat had no effect on 11,571 ambitious visitors and residents in the District last month. That many walked to the top of the Washington Monument.

A total of 123,127 rode to the top. And the combined total of 134,698, according to Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, made the second highest total of visitors recorded since the structure was opened 51 years ago.

The all-time record month was July, 1937, Gartside said. The total then was 163,000, a mark reached with the help of a majority of the 25,000 Boy Scouts who camped on the grounds under the Monument for their national jamboree.

Disregarding the 123,127 "softies" who chose the elevator, officials expressed elation at the number of stair climbers. Monument statistics show that it's 500 feet up to the nearest window, or a total of 898 stairs. This does not include the walk between flights.

The reason for all the concentrated energy? Officials wouldn't pin it down. One suggested that the more than 200 carved blocks set into the inner wall of the Monument by the States, several cities, and organizations, are worth seeing.

Another had a better answer—even when it's summer in Washington, it's always cool inside the Monument.

Commercial Artists Here Elect Officers

The recently organized Society of Commercial Artists of Washington has elected William J. Sholar, jr., chairman; Nelson Davis, vice chairman, and Mark Fore, secretary. Mary Duffy Ward, Grace Wood Herring, August Bartels and Charles Isbell were elected to the executive committee.

The purpose of the society is social and cultural. There willl be a weekly sketch class and an annual ball.

Roosevelt Hears Navy Building Plans

President Roosevelt yesterday called in a group of his planners and architects to report on progress on the proposed Navy Department building.

Although there is little likelihood of the project's being authorized and an appropriation made before next year, general plans for the structure are well along.

William T. Partridge, consultant to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, displayed a model showing how the proposed Navy group, including a museum and a berth for historic ships, will look in relation to the Potomac River on the west and the new War Deparment buildings on the east.

Others who met with the President were John Nolen, jr., planning director of the Park and Planning Commission; W. D. Foster, consulting architect of the Public Buildings Administration, and LeRoy Barton, of the Procurement Division.

W. A. Sherman Services Set For Tomorrow

Retired Government Employe Spent 43 Years in U. S. Service

Funeral services for Wells A. Sherman, former specialist in charge of the fruits and vegetable division of the Agriculture Department who died Wednesday night after a 10-day illness, will be held at the home at Ash Grove, Va., at 2:30 tomorrow. Burial will be private.

SHERMAN

Mr. Sherman was widely known in his field of work. He directed the experimental activity leading to the establishment of the Market News Service in 1915, and developed the Nation-wide shipping point inspection service for all fruits and vegetables.

He attended the Greylock Institute, North Williamstown, Mass., and as a young man was deputy treasurer of Fairfax County for several years. He retired a year ago, after 43 years in the service. Seven years were spent as examiner in the Civil Service Commission. The remainder was in the Agriculture Department.

Long active in church affairs, he recently had been associated in the work of the Laymen's Conference of the Methodist Church. He was born July 19, 1868, at Ash Grove, the son of Franklin and Caroline Alvord Sherman, and spent practically all of his life in Fairfax County.

Surviving are Mr. Sherman's wife, Mrs. Elsie Besley Sherman; four daughters, Mrs. Deming J. Shear, East Falls Church, Mrs. Thedore B. Manny, Mrs. John R. Blake, and Mrs. Judson C. Cobb, of Washington; a son, W. A. Sherman, jr., of Ash Grove; four sisters, Ruth B. Sherman, Baltimore, Miriam, Caroline and Dorothea Sherman, of Washington, and four brothers, Dr. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia University, Prof. Franklin Sherman, of Clemson College; John H. Sherman, president of the University of Tampa, and Dr. James M. Sherman, of Cornell University.

William Monroe Funeral Monday

Services will be held Monday for William Monroe, 57, chief messenger of the D. C. Highway Department, who died Wednesday night at Freedmen's Hospital.

A native of Washington, Mr. Monroe served 32 years with the Highway Department. He was a member of James Reese Europe Post, No. 5, American Legion; John F. Cook Masonic Lodge and LeDroit Park Citizens Association, and was president of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church Men's Club. He made his home at 412 U street northwest.

Masonic and military rites will be held in Arlington Cemetery, following services in the church, Nineteenth and U streets northwest. The Rev. Walter Brooks, pastor, will conduct the servies.

Surviving are Mr. Monroe's wife, Louise; a sister, Mrs. Martha Mann, and a brother, Randolph.

Housing Measure Buried by House

year period, and prior authorizations would raise this to $4,380,000,000.

"This is in addition to the billions proposed to be loaned which will never be recovered," shouted Gore.

"There is nothing low-cost about the program. Each family unit will cost over $10,000 eventually and on one project the family unit cost will be $14,000. I wonder how many of us in this chamber live in $14,000 homes which are being provided in this program?"

Sabath Upholds Bill

In contrast, Chairman Sabath, of the House Rules Committee, in opening debate had asserted that this "humane and needed legislation will not cost the Government any money." Likewise, Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, insisted it was merely a "loan bill" extending a program the House already had approved. Interest charged by the USHA, Steagall said, would reduce the cost over the years, and he denied the Government would contribute $2,700,000,000. Also urging consideration, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who backed the Administration last year on "third basket" penalty taxes, criticized Democrats for joining with Republicans against the lending program and warned of the dangers of a Democratic Party schism.

Majority Leader Rayburn, who took the floor early this week to appeal for consideration of the lending bill, did not repeat the appeal, but voted for the rule. Speaker Bankhead also had the clerk call his name and voted "Aye."

Representative Mapes (Democrat), of Michigan, managing Republican opposition to the bill, was forced to assign much of his time to Democrats speaking against the measure, as Sabath declined Democratic time for party members opposed to the legislation. Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, led the Republican attack. Like Gore, he charged 60-year costs totaling nearly $5,000,000,000, with "nothing returned to the Treasury." Wolcott declared private capital has demonstrated its ability to finance successful low-cost housing projects, and urged a summer study to promote private slum clearance operations.

Two Obstacles

Sidetracking of lending, housing and wage-hour bills left only two obstacles to adjournment—the third deficiency bill and the deadlocked social security amendments.

The House has passed both, and awaits only final Senate or conference action. But so deep was the $161,000,000 cut ordered by the House in the deficiency bill that it was believed certain to come back from the Senate with some funds restored, plus the threat of relief act riders obnoxious to conservative House members. If it does, a last pitched legislative battle may ensue.

Her Fame Is Priced at $100,000

Susan Hayward, 22, and a movie starlet, dropped in to say hello yesterday to Walter Thornton, beauty model impresario, in New York City. He greeted her with a summons for a $100,000 suit charging breach of contract. Wailed Thornton: "I made her famous, got her a contract in Hollywood—and she forgot us." Sued Susan, who'll be at the Capitol Theater today to prove why she is Hollywood's newest contender for "oomph girl," said she'd fight today to prove why she is Hollywood's newest contender for "oomph girl," said she'd fight

R. C. Johnson, Ex-Legislator, Is Eulogized

Rep. Case and V. F. W. Praise South Dakota Veteran; Rites Today

Former Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota, who will be buried today at 10 a. m. at Arlington National Cemetery, was eulogized yesterday on the floor of Congress and by a leader of veterans, whose cause he championed in the House. He lived at 1868 Columbia road northwest and represented South Dakota in Congress from 1915 until 1933.

Among those who eulogized him yesterday was Representative Case, of South Dakota, who said:

"In the Sixty-fifth Congress Royal Johnson voted against the declaration of war, yet, loyal American that he was, he offered to give up his seat in this body to join those whom Congress sent to the colors. He enlisted as a private; he rose to a first lieutenancy as a line officer. He was wounded in action in the Meuse-Argonne. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre with a star. He was really a great South Dakotan and a great American."

Others speaking in his memory were Representatives Mundt, Rogers, McCormick and Luce. Mr. Johnson was called the father of veterans' hospitalization in a statement from national headquarters of the V. F. W.

Every Government hospital for disabled veterans in the United States "stands as a monument to the memory of Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota, and his devotion to the welfare of America's disabled veterans and their dependents," it was said yesterday by Eugene I. Antwerp, national commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Czechs Revive Secret Legion in Fight for Liberty

Prague (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The Czech Mafia, secret, underground organization which played such a large role in creating conditions which made a Czech state possible after the World War, is again at work.

Now, as when the Czechs were under the Hapsburg heel, the object is to wrest freedom from their rulers.

It is busy recruiting men for the Czech Legion which Gen. Lev Prchala is commanding in Poland. Once recruited, the men have to be smuggled across the border. There are supposed to be about 18,000 members of Gen. Prchala's forces intended to be at the service of any country willing to help the Czechs regain their independence.

Rites Set Today For Mrs. Morgan

Funeral service for Mrs. Rosa V. Morgan, 72, who died Wednesday at her home, 424 Fourth street northeast, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Lee Funeral Home, with the Rev. Walter C. Hook officiating. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Born and reared in Frederick, Md., Mrs. Morgan came to Washington 33 years ago. Surviving are her husband, a son by a former marriage, Edward J. Ladue, and a brother, Edmund Eyler, of Alabama.

He was a founder of the Jewish Youth League, a past president of the National Council of Jewish Education, and superintendent of the Hebrew school system in Cleveland.

Taft Announces 1940 Candidacy

SENATOR TAFT

"Willing" to Run in '40

It was said he would urge Republicans to send uninstructed delegates to the next national convention.

Outlining his views on national problems, Taft said that unless "the whole present tendency of government is redirected, we can not long maintain financial solvency or free enterprise or even individual liberty in the United States."

Calls for Courage

"The leaders of the movement against New Deal fallacies must have the courage to incur the unlimited displeasure of every vested interest whose selfish purposes conflict with a radical policy of reform," he added.

"Furthermore, they must work out the very difficult problem of continuing an adequate provision for the less fortunate people through relief, old-age pensions, subsidized housing and the like on the one hand, while on the other restoring financial solvency and the spirit of business initiative and expansion which alone can cure unemployment. This is not going to be easy or pleasant."

Tinkham Urges Strict Neutrality For U.S. in Orient

By International News Service

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, accusing President Roosevelt of having negotiated a secret Anglo-American alliance in the Far East, yesterday introduced a resolution calling upon him to institute a policy of "strict neutrality" in the Sino-Japanese war.

Fulfillment of its commitments under the alliance, the resolution said, would inevitably involve this Nation in war with Japan and bring "disaster" to the United States. The resolution calls upon the President to "dissociate" this country from Britain at once.

In a statement Tinkham said "The United States cannot underwrite the boundaries, the political commitments and the interests of Great Britain in Europe and Asia without becoming involved in war, and war would mean the destruction of our country."

Farley, Daughters Arrive in Germany

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 3 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley, with his daughters, Ann and Betty, arrived on the Manhattan today on a European vacation trip.

He said he had no official appointments in Germany and the only official persons he hoped to see here were members of the German postal service.

Man's Salvation Still Possible, Wells Opines

Hope for Mankind Rests in U. S. With Roosevelt, Says Writer

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—H. G. Wells contends that the United States, guided by a "great man and patrician," Franklin D. Roosevelt, holds the clearest hope for the salvation of man through the development of a "world brain."

The 73-year-old novelist and philosopher otherwise ponders gloomily on humanity, its leaders and its future in "the fate of Homo Sapiens," his latest book, published today.

He concludes that the world brain, the education of mankind through super-universities until it is fit for a democracy in which there would be real equality, economic justice, universal education and full knowledge for all those who desire it, is the only hope.

He predicts that humanity, "which began in a cave, will end in the disease-soaked ruins of a slum."

The salvation of mankind is "still just possible," however, by a "willful and strenuous adaptation by reeducation of our species now—forthwith" to fit it for a kind of universal democracy.

Wells devotes a 20-page chapter to "the American mentality" and finds the United States "the most freespoken, active, perplexing and various of countries" in which "radical and liberal and democratic ideas have had a maximum of expression."

As for the United States after Roosevelt, he wrote, "it is hard to guess what may happen when this abnormal phase of personal government by one inspired, insufficiently able man of genius comes to an end. There is no one to replace him and nothing to replace him. Nothing is being prepared."

Mrs. Crounse Regains $930,000 In Trust Funds

Mrs. Lola M. Crounse, wealthy poetess, yesterday regained almost $1,000,000 in trust funds by decrees signed by Justice Luhring in District Court.

Mrs. Crounse Wednesday was granted an annulment of her marriage to Joseph Whitla Stinson, whom she charged with drugging her into matrimony so he could dupe her out of her fortune.

Justice Luhring dissolved a $230,000 trust Mrs. Crounse set up for Stinson and another trust of $700,000, which she established for her relatives.

The decrees terminated a series of involved lawsuits over the marriage and the money.

Screen Actors' Guild Taking Strike Vote

Hollywood, Aug. 3 (INS).—Aimed at the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, a strike vote is being taken among members of the Screen Actors' Guild, Kenneth Thompson, executive secretary, announced tonight.

It was reported that the Players' Guild was ready to high pressure the major film producers against acceding to the demand of the I. A. T. S. E. for a closed shop at the Hollywood studios, which would bar the newly formed United Studio Technicians' Guild.

Coast Firm to Build Four Merchant Ships

A West Coast shipyard—Consolidated Steel Corporation, Ltd., Los Angeles—received a $7,560,000 award from the Maritime Commission yesterday for construction of four cargo ships of the C-1 design.

The award brought the total of new ships ordered by the commission, either for its own account or in co-operation with private operators, to 70.

Across The River

Washingtonians may well be envious of their neighbors in nearby Arlington.

For some time that rapidly growing Virginia county has been rocked with controversy over the question of whether the Lee boulevard should be made into a commercial zone. Certain members of the county board favored it. A large majority of the people of Arlington did not and through their civic organizations made a vigorous fight to prevent such zoning.

The civic organizations of the District are no less vigorous or public-spirited than those of neighboring Virginia and Maryland areas. But all the local bodies can do is to make their views known and trust the Commissioners and Congress to do the right thing. Frustration is at least as frequent as success.

In Arlington, however, the civic organizations were in a position to take the issue to the people. They did and the latter responded with a will. In this week's Democratic primaries the candidates for the county board who had favored the commercial zoning of Lee boulevard were decisively defeated; the opponents of such action came out decisively on top.

Thus through democratic processes available to the people of every part of the United States, with the sole exception of the District of Columbia, the people of Arlington have made their views known in effective fashion by defeating the public officials who had ignored their wishes.

Labor's Civil War

The current strikes and riots in the country's leading automobile centers originate in causes very different from those that precipitated the disturbances and sit-down strikes of a few years ago. Then battles were fought for union recognition, and the contests were waged between employers and employes. Today the employers stand rather helplessly on the sidelines while belligerent factions within the ranks of organized labor fight one another for the right to represent the workers in bargaining agreements.

An excellent illustration of the bitterness of this internecine warfare is afforded by an A. F. of L. order to construction workers employed in General Motors plants to ignore C. I. O. picket lines. While the unions concerned are reported averse to obeying this command, its mere issuance testifies to the "rule or ruin" policy that now prevails in the world of organized labor.

When the large automobile companies first consented to enter into contracts with the United Automobile Workers it was thought that the battle for collective bargaining had been won, so far as this industry was concerned. But the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split put two contenders in the field for the privilege of acting as exclusive bargaining agency. The result is a recrudescence of violence and intimidation under conditions that offer much less hope of an ultimately satisfactory settlement.

The National Labor Relations Board has been severely criticized for delay in forcing elections that would decide the disputed issue of representation. It has met that challenge by calling for elections in the plants of three automobile companies caught between contending labor factions, although it has not yet responded to the appeal of the General Motors management to order an election for its employes.

However, labor troubles in the automobile industry, or in any other industry where the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. are contenders for power, are not likely to be settled definitely by NLRB rulings. For the mere polling of employes will not decide the issue. The NLRB itself, for instance, divided 2 to 1 on the question of the appropriate bargaining unit to set up for the elections just ordered, the majority deciding in favor of the plant rather than the corporation unit. As a result, the board is being charged with leaning toward the A. F. of L. faction. Had it ruled otherwise it would have been accused of C. I. O. leanings.

Given a united labor movement, the rivalries between craft and industrial unions and the disputes involved in overlapping jurisdiction of unions could be settled much more easily. The labor relations act, designed to further peaceful negotiation of wage-and-hour contracts, is based on the assumption of labor's solidarity. It becomes a very inadequate aid to peace when this assumed solidarity is discovered to be nonexistent. The NLRB likewise is put in an untenable position by being forced to hand down rulings that are not judged on their merits, but in relation to their effects upon the fortunes of rival labor groups.

Underneath The Revolt

While the shattering of the spending program is the most spectacular part of this week's Congressional revolt, the real significance of the Administration's defeat goes far deeper. More important than the belated turn toward economy, which another Congress might all too easily reverse, is the assertion by the Legislature of its constitutional and fundamental "power of the purse." The moral of that action should and will be understood.

Complete legislative control over appropriations has always been the basic safeguard of democracy against dictatorial executive encroachment. It was the effort of Charles I to make Parliament yield on this issue which led to his overthrow and execution. It was a full appreciation of what the issue involved which made the members of the Constitutional Convention emphasize it so strongly in writing the organic law of the United States.

Article I of the Constitution specifies that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives," as the Chamber more subject to popular control. And it further lays down categorically that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but (except) in consequence of appropriations made by law." The authors of the Constitution were well aware of the danger that an over-ambitious executive might in one way or another seek to gain control of the public purse. And they were wisely anxious to raise every possible safeguard against such tendencies.

In very large part the smashing setback experienced by the Administration this week must be attributed to its casual attitude toward this cardinal principle of the American Government.

Time and again Congress has been asked to rubber-stamp enormous appropriations, presented so casually as to give the impression that the function of the House in this matter is merely that of a Nazi Reichstag. Time and again Congress has all too willingly complied with—and even exceeded—the appropriations demanded. But soon or late the sense of Congressional responsibility and the realization of Congressional authority in the matter of the public purse were bound to revive, assuming that the principles of democracy are still alive in this country. And that they are still very much alive was demonstrated this week.

It was, of course, the underlying character of the latest pump-priming scheme which led to the Congressional revolt. "There seems no reason," said President Roosevelt in launching this scheme, "why there should not be adopted as a permanent policy of the Government (italics ours) the development and maintenance of a revolving fund fed from the earnings of these Government investments and used to finance new projects at times when there is need of extra stimulus to employment."

What this scheme meant, in plain language, was socialization of credit. It meant that the Administration, as a permanent policy, would collect the savings of the country and "invest" them in such undertakings as seemed to it desirable, all this taking place outside the regular budget and without routing through the Treasury the funds borrowed and lent. It meant, in other words, not merely a further undermining of the normal processes of investment. It meant also a subtle but none the less revolutionary encroachment upon the Congressional power of the purse.

The Senate sharply trimmed this so-called "spending-lending" bill—but left its dangerous underlying idea intact. It was the House, where more than a few members saw the magnitude of the issue involved, which had the courage to kill the measure outright. Thereby it reestablished its inalienable prerogative. Thereby it has richly earned the national gratitude.

Inevitably the smashing of the Administration's scheme of socialized credit has brought down other projects in the ruins. Individually some of these results, such as yesterday's refusal to extend the borrowing power of the USHA, seem very unfortunate. But in extenuation it must be remembered that in extinguishing a dangerous conflagration firemen frequently cause some regrettable damage.

Congress, and the House in particular, has put a stop, for the present at any rate, to a thorough-going socialistic policy which can most easily be forwarded under the insidious mask of deficit-financing. And Congress further has brought the Administration up with a sharp bump by such actions as its refusal to restore the "capital impairment" of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Incidentally, that seems a nice example of an undertaking which can speciously be called "self-liquidating" in advance, while in the upshot it suffers "capital impairment" of $119,599,918 which Congress is expected automatically to restore by a deficiency bill.

Such reminders of where the power of the purse resides are viewed by Secretary Wallace as "unthinking" and "probably iniquitous." The adjectives are misapplied. Congress never worked more thoughtfully; it never acted with deeper consideration of the Nation's long-range interest, than in the good riddance to bad rubbish accomplished this week.

Around The Corner

By his action in throwing his hat into the ring for the Republican nomination for the Presidency, Senator Taft has formally opened the 1940 race.

The national conventions are now less than a year away. For quite some time an undetermined number of individuals in both the Republican and the Democratic camps have been suffering from stings inflicted by the Presidential bee. They have put up with that sweet agony more or less in silence. Both the dictates of modesty and the fear of getting out in front too early in the game have inhibited them from too openly avowing their ambitions.

They need suffer no longer. Now that Senator Taft has made his bid for the Presidency, even while asserting his preference for his present post, the barriers are down—at least on the Republican side. And the spur of ambition is now supplemented by the pressure of necessity. It was the "peculiar provisions" of the Ohio constitution, compelling candidates for delegate in the party primaries to designate their first choice for the Presidency, which led Senator Taft frankly to enter the lists at this time. Similar considerations will lead others to offer their names.

Senator Taft is certain to make a strong bid for the Republican nomination. He has vigor, ability, shrewd common sense and the advantage of possessing a name already associated with the White House. Moreover his most formidable potential opponent in his own State, Gov. Bricker, has withdrawn in his favor. But the race is only just formally begun and other would-be contestants are yet to be heard from. They will be. And how!

The Democrats who share Senator Taft's ambition are in a less favorable position. They, too, would like to get going. But the barrier of White House silence on the third term issue holds them back. President Roosevelt has suffered a succession of disastrous defeats at the hands of the present Congress. He remains sufficiently powerful in his party to be a force which all (or should one say all other?) would-be candidates for the Democratic nomination must reckon with.

At any rate, the race is on; the Presidential year has begun; 1940 is indubitably just around the corner.

Needed All Year

If there had been further need of demonstrating the very deep esteem in which Washingtonians hold their orchestra it would have been provided by the magnificent turnout at the Watergate on Wednesday night. The estimates were that at least 25,000 came to hear "Madame Butterfly." And of that vast audience everyone was captivated by an orchestra and a setting well worthy of the Metropolitan singers.

It was the first time so ambitious a program has been attempted at the sunset symphonies and the success of the effort thoroughly justifies Dr. Kindler in planning an even more varied repertoire for next summer's series. The National Symphony has moved forward slowly, desiring to be sure of its ground before embarking on difficult ventures. Wednesday's magnificent success, a treat for eye and ear, shows the wisdom of this conservative course.

The Watergate concerts of the orchestra have achieved as much for the cultural life of the Capital during the summer months as the regular concerts have done during the winter. The group has demonstrated conclusively that the need for it runs round the calendar.

The Co-operative Spirit

From the London Daily Mail, reprinted from Living Age.

The Arabs have frequently cut the pipe lines between the oil wells and Haifa. Each time a couple of experts have been compelled to go out into the desert and mend them. Recently they found themselves surrounded by Arabs who wished to know what they were doing. It was an ugly moment, but they explained their mission quite frankly. The Arabs were most interested, admitting freely that they were the people who had been cutting the pipes.

"But why do you do it?" they were asked.

"Oh, we are paid five English pounds each time we do it," was the reply.

"Does it really matter where you cut them?" asked the Englishmen.

"Not a bit."

"Well," said the Englishmen, "if it's all the same to you, couldn't you cut them a bit nearer Haifa so that we do not have to go such a long way to mend them?"

"By all means," said the Arab leader, proving again the chivalry of the desert.

What's more, he has kept to his word.

Lewis-Garner Dispute

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Lewis versus Garner dispute brings the usual clash in your columns between writers of opposing camps. Thousands acclaim the presumed unmasking of the sphinx-like old chieftain of tradition and reaction. Equally loud are the protestants of conservative views. I doubt that the ill-timed diatribe of the leonine Mr. Lewis will effect a change in the minds of many.

Very few people think. Most people react like machines to stimuli. Those who are Republicans, Democrats, Baptists, Catholics or Methodists usually defend their beliefs by rationalizations. They are sure they are right. The environment of one's bringing up, the security of one's position or the lack of it accounts in the main for one's political views. The source of one's principles, the real reasons for one's beliefs, the cause of one's prejudices are seldom understood by those affected.

Few people adopt a scientific attitude of self-analysis. Most feelings and much behavior is accounted for by personal predilection. How many people want to know from authoritative sources? Who try to distinguish between propaganda and fact? A good Fascist or a good Communist, if listened to, can make good argument, but the dyed-in-the-wool conservative, or the confirmed liberal will not be changed.

I wonder if the type and method of school education will ever produce really intelligently acting people?

E. B. HENDERSON.

Falls Church, Va., August 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I quote from the letter of Mrs. J. B. Davis, printed on August 1:

For it was not Mr. Lewis that was speaking. It was the exploited American masses that were expressing themselves indignantly against their enemies.

I presume this is the result of demagoguery of the past few years. Exploitation there is, but of a far different nature. It is time the patriotic, thinking American forsook this "enemy" idea.

Surely there is none so blind as not to see that, in a society as interrelated and interdependent as ours, each is necessary to the other's welfare and existence! Hence, the idea of "enemy" is entirely fictional, but one that has been carefully imbedded in the minds of many to stimulate class hatred and create a party of people to be used as a tool for political purposes. The "enemy" is without—awaiting the gradual demoralization and disintegration of a society divided by hatred.

Great things can be accomplished through the strength of a union and there is nothing to prevent any people from wanting to establish and develop some just cause by such united effort. But let not this cause be prompted through hatred and vituperation for any such cause must inevitably collapse from its own weakness. Hatred does not bind—it has the opposite effect.

Lasting benefits are never founded on the cult of hate and any leader who is an exponent of this cult is a person not to be trusted.

The Retirement System

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: None can fail to agree with the central premise of your editorial "Retirement Act Changes;" namely, that liberalization of retirement is a long overdue reform and that it should not be delayed "by disagreement over the rate of contribution to be levied."

Yet little can be said in defense of the view that liberalization which will be of permanent value, and actuarially sound, can be gained without additional, or adequately additional, contributions to the retirement fund. The National Federation of Federal Employes, whose pioneer efforts resulted in the enactment of the original retirement act and subsequent amendments, always has insisted, and insists now, that the basis of the retirement system must be broad, firm, and sound, fair to employe, Government, and taxpayer alike.

For that reason, the National Federation of Federal Employes strongly supported the carefully drawn Ramspeck bill, giving very substantial new benefits in return for an increase in employe contribution.

But what your editorial failed to bring out was the fact that while Mr. Ramspeck first was given assurances by other employe groups of their willingness to support this wholly sound and progressive plan, certain of them later reneged. To those who have been in the thick of the long struggle first for a retirement law and then for its liberalization, this was no new thing. Such tactics have constantly delayed the forward march of retirement legislation. These obstacles we always have finally overcome; but the delay has ever been costly and hurtful.

We noted with particular interest your statement that because many employes in the low salary groups have a struggle to make both ends meet there is some basis for opposition to an increased contribution. In point of fact, however, it is the low salary groups which have been the largest beneficiaries under the act as amended in 1930 and their position would have been still further improved and strengthened under the Ramspeck bill.

Your editorial here adds: "Moreover, to the younger employes the benefits of the pension (sic) system seem remote, while the sacrifices are immediate and very real."

Apparently this is set forth as an argument against the larger contribution, although that seems incredible. Such a point would appear to offer convincing proof of the truth of our recent statement that emasculation of the Ramspeck bill revealed clearly that a vigorous campaign of education among Federal employes is essential to point out where their best interests lie. The fact that some younger employes fail to see the immense value of the retirement system of which they are the beneficiaries, surely cannot logically be adduced as a reason for failing to improve that system. Younger employes, in the nature of things, do not always remain young, and time usually brings a clearer perspective on so vital a matter as financial independence in old age.

It seems to us, as the leaders of a responsible organization, that such a situation points in the direction of education to correct a short-sighted attitude. To accept it as an insurmountable obstacle in the way of progress is unthinkable.

Be assured that The Post's interest in the whole question of Federal employe retirement is deeply appreciated by the National Federation of Federal Employes and by the organizations with which it is associated in the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations.

I. R. A. Bombings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an American of Celtic extraction I acquiesce thoroughly in your editorial of July 28 condemning the "bombings" attributed to the I. R. A. I find it hard to get words in the unabridged dictionaries to reprobate the fiendish atrocities committed by these savage barbarians.

In the last analysis these outrages must be ascribed to David Lloyd George, who received his inspiration from the father of the present King of England. If George Creel, in his history of Ireland, tells the truth, King George V was primarily responsible for the partition of Ireland. He was Hanoverian to the core and hated Ireland with a cordial detestation. He catered to Sir Edward Carson, et al., and cast that great conservative Irishman, John Redmond, to the wolves.

This outrageous treason created a group of fanatics, of whose insanity England is now the victim. It is generally admitted that the Versailles Treaty created Hitler and in order to understand Hitler we must first understand the Versailles Treaty. There was a cause for the criminal career of Jesse and Frank James. The outrageous mutilation of Ireland is the cause of the savagery of the I. R. A.

DANIEL DIXON.

Washington, July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to comment on the recent letter from the reader signing himself "Ulster Pat" in your Letters to the Editor columns. In his consideration of the activities of the Irish Republicans he should not close his eyes to the fact that if the Scottish people of today, whose forefathers valiantly fought England, do not want to hold their identity as a self-governing people, the Irish do not take that passive view of their rights as a race and a nation.

It seems to me that the people of the United States, some of whose forefathers were victims of tyranny and oppression, owes its sympathies to the Irish race in its struggle to exist as a separate, distinct and free people. More power to the Irish Republicans.

Loyalty to the Job

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a widespread feeling that A. F. of L. unionism is American unionism and that C. I. O. unionism is Moscow unionism. That is why many people distrust the National Labor Relations Board with its apparent marked partiality to the C. I. O.

Those of the older generation, who must soon pass from the scene, were raised in an atmosphere where loyalty to their jobs and to their employer was looked upon as a matter of course. They distrust the activities of labor leaders who present "demand" upon "demand" and who apparently seek to destroy every vestige of loyalty of the employe to the employer. That makes for shiftlessness, shirking, loafing and poor work. American industry cannot compete with disciplined Germany, Italy and Japan under these conditions. The workers who follow these leaders are fouling their own nests and they will have only themselves to blame if the march of the totalitarian states to dominate world trade leaves them in the ranks of the unemployed.

The C. I. O. is loud in its complaints against employers alleged to have discriminated against this man or that one because of "union activity." The man's lack of loyalty to his employer and his job is more frequently the cause of the alleged discrimination. No employer, if he can do otherwise, will hire a man whom he knows to be disloyal at heart. Loyalty to the job is the crying need of America today.

The Post Impressionist

Relativity

GREAT MINDS have agitated themselves over concepts of time, and I cannot hope to add anything to their work. But I can, perhaps, give some light on the practical application of their theories.

From the day when young Ponsby first noticed the wagging of a pendulum (this was when he was 6 months old) he was fascinated by clocks and watches. Anything horological, from the most primitive water clock to the latest electric time-piece, will cause Ponsby to go into a trance. Inevitably, he became a collector, and he has just fulfilled his ambition in acquiring a watch which once belonged to, I think, Marie Antoinette, though maybe it was Catherine the Great; anyway, it is a triumph of the hor- anyway, it is a triumph of the horologist's art. All that bothers Ponsroom is filled with something that ticks or strikes or chimes, and there is no place for the latest specimen.

Now nature, which has to maintain some kind of equilibrium, else the universe would run lopsided, observed that she had made Ponsby a little off-center. So then and there she made Hod Perkins in order to offset her original mistake with another entirely different.

Hod and Ponsby have never met and they would not thank me for this introduction. The only reason for bringing them together is Hod's antipathy for measuring time, in contrast with Ponsby's mania for it. Hod never knew there was any such thing as time until he was over 50. He lived in a mucky shack almost in the water, took to himself a wife, raised a few young ones, caught eels, ate, drank and slept; and he left time alone if it would do the same by him. He had a cook stove (except when the circus came to town; he pawned the stove annually to buy tickets), some bunks for sleeping (though he slept well anywhere), a table and a chair. But he never owned a clock.

Then the day of his affliction dawned; someone gave his old woman an alarm clock. As Ponsby had conceived a passion for clocks, so Hod was filled with a violent hatred for them. The very ticking of the thing and the way the hands went around, broke into the coma in which he had lived comfortably for years, maybe for aeons, he didn't know or care.

His cronies noticed that he was in bad spirits.

"The old fellow is failing," they said, but they were wrong. He told me about it when it got too much for him to cope with.

"Here I was," Hod told me, bitterly, "just livin' and enjoyin' myself, like things was a kind of a circle with me in the middle, all fixed comfortable, and knowing just where I was. Things was stationary, if you know what I mean. I don't like to think about something movin' along that has got to be measured off. If time is goin' on now, it must have been goin' on always, and it seems to me like a tape measure running way back. It makes me plumb miserable to think about it.

"It was bad enough to have the clock, and then I thought about almanacs. Maybe I ought to get one of them things, and study how to measure summer and winter and the like of them. I never thought about it before, except that sometimes it is cold and sometimes the sun is hot on my back, and sometimes there is one kind of fish runnin' and sometimes another kind.

"Then you take history. I begun to think about that. It seems like a kind of puzzle that you fit together along this tape line. Maybe I ought to get me a history book, and then I recall I can't see so good as I used to and there are big words that I wouldn't know, not being an educated man. That's an awful responsibility for me to take on, getting me an almanac, and reading a history book. It makes me so uncomfortable I itch all over just to think about it.

"It time goes way back, it must go ahead, too. Some time the measurin' will be goin' on, and maybe I will stop. I don't know. I think about all them gloomy things. I get real melancholy, and eels fried in lard don't seem to agree with me like they used to. Everything is all broke up, me no longer sitting in the middle of things, and they going 'round me, world without end."

I could not help Hod very much in his dilemma, and I didn't happen to see him for some time. When I did he looked all right again, and was putting away a hearty meal of his favorite eels.

It was the clock again, he told me. His "leastest child" had accidentally knocked the clock off the table and busted it—the best thing the youngster had ever done. In his exuberance of gratitude he bought him a stick of striped candy and gave him an eel for a pet in the water bucket.

His tape-measure concept of time faded out of his recollection; history obligingly went back where it belonged, and no longer intruded into more important things. Past and future shifted for themselves as best they could, and Hod retreated into his peculiar concept of time with himself in the center, always had been and always would be!

But I still say I want to be present at the meeting of Ponsby and Hod, whether it occurs in time or eternity.

Fair Enough

Public Censorship

AFTER I WROTE yesterday's piece, in which I suggested that we might have to turn to the English and Canadian press to beat the censorship imposed on the New Orleans affair by the United States Department of Justice, I was the guest at dinner of Webb Miller, the distinguished international journalist and war reporter. Mr. Miller was surprised and a little incredulous, I thought, to hear that we had in this country a censorship on public affairs which are by law and tradition available to the public.

Of course, certain facts having to do with foreign relations may be held secret during negotiations lest immature and tentative dealings be jangled by publicity which is purely mischievous. There is no censorship on such matter, however, unless it be created by journalists themselves as a measure of co-operation with the public officials in charge. The officials just don't give it out, or give it out in confidence. The same is true of military secrets, but grand jury proceedings are confidential, and violation of this secrecy is punishable as contempt of court. But that grand jury privilege stops short of the censorship which has been established by the Department of Justice in the New Orleans investigation.

New Orleans News Appears Censored

FROM NEW ORLEANS there have come dispatches hinting at information which would make very interesting and legitimate reading but for the censorship, and several days after those hints comes a guarded but suggestive remark in a dispatch from Tom Stokes about a babble of confessions.

In Europe, where Webb Miller has worked since 1917, the governments of the rival groups use the radio to spread propaganda, most of it deliberately false, among the people who are their enemies in the as yet undeclared and bloodless war. The radio has no respect for international borders. It penetrates and peoples are informed on affairs on their own countries and others by sounds out of the air. It isn't a good way of doing, but if the Department of Justice is determined to smother information which is common knowledge in New Orleans, people have a right to suspect that the department itself has decided not to come clean for reasons which could be political, in view of the fact that the New Orleans and Louisiana gang has been a section of the political organization which runs the Federal Government. There is still the air. There is still the secret pamphlet.

Judges May Hide Their Own Guilt

MAYBE THE PEOPLE should entirely trust the Department of Justice and all those, including the learned judges, who are of it. But, then, there was the Department of Justice of the days of Harry Daugherty and William J. Burns, and when people recall that regime they are justified in demanding that the department always lay it on the line.

Moreover, this National Administration is very friendly to the Communists and their fellow-travelers and innocents, and many such are spotted around in the Government, particularly in the legal departments. They are very partial to censorship in the public interest.

And it is not forgotten that only recently one of the most powerful and distinguished Federal judges in the land was caught flat-footed. He, too, was a man who could have threatened to punish for contempt of court any reporter or publisher who made public information of his guilt, which he arbitrarily and without legal justification held to be confidential.

It is a bad habit, censorship, and a court brings itself into contempt when it resorts to censorship which is not plainly permitted in the law. Such a court, the Department of Justice itself should be challenged and confronted in a contempt proceeding, for its own sake if for no other.

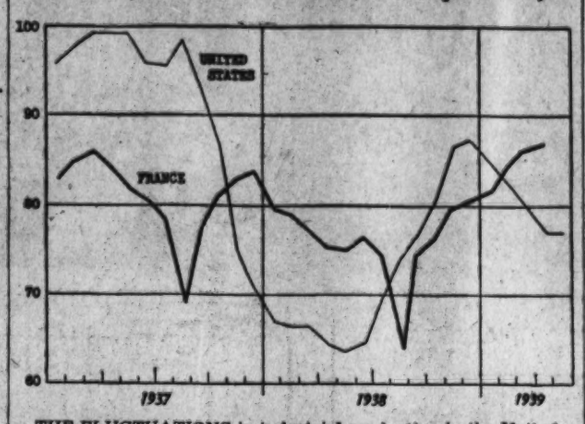
Secrecy Often Used To Conceal Tracks

IT WOULD BE POSSIBLE, scientifically and technically, though perhaps not politically, to telephone the information which is common knowledge in New Orleans or Cuba for broadcast back into the United States. It would be possible also to phone or wire the copy to some nearby border point in Mexico or Canada or to Cuba and for American papers to pick it up and publish it under the saving line that El Mundo or the Globe today said as follows about the suppressed New Orleans affair.

It has been agreed that publicity may help guilty men to cover their tracks. That could be so, but as Mr. Miller pointed out, out of his long experience in European countries, secrecy is more often used for this purpose than publicity. And even if it should turn out that in this particular case secrecy served the ends of justice, that is no guarantee that when the precedent has been accepted, the same means will not be used to protect criminals, on the bench, in the Department of Justice—and in the dominant political organization.

France's Recovery

Indices Of General Production (1929 Equals 100)



THE FLUCTUATIONS in industrial production in the United States and France during the past two and a half years are shown in the accompanying chart. Since the two curves are based on somewhat different data, they are not closely comparable, but they are useful for indicating general trends. The similarity of the upturn in both countries during the second half of 1938 is of especial interest. In France, however, the gains have continued thus far during 1939.

The improvement in that country is highly important because of its bearing on the European situation and its possible aid in preserving world peace. The increase in industrial production is due in part to the stimulation of war industries, but there have been gains in many other directions.

Both foreign and domestic trade have expanded; fugitive capital has been repatriated; government finances are in much better shape; and the franc, several times revalued within two years, has become one of the most steady currencies on the continent.

THE FIRST experiments in currency devaluation, in 1936 and 1937, did not have the desired effect. With rising production costs and widespread labor disputes under the government of the Popular Front, the economic situation rapidly deteriorated, and there were sharp crises in 1937 and 1938. Recovery is now being promoted by a return to the conventional methods of economy and hard work, and the progress thus far achieved has not escaped the notice of the neighboring powers.

Monkey Immigrants From Asia Live Well on American Island

Colony Off Puerto Rico Expands With 54 Births and 30 More Due; Primates Imported for Scientists

Monkey business in Puerto Rico is expanding.

According to Interior Department reports, there have been 54 births of Rhesus monkeys since June 1 on Santiago Island, near Puerto Rico, the first primate colony ever to be established under the American flag. The project is designed eventually to free American scientists from dependence for their experiments on foreign-raised monkeys.

An additional 30 monkey babies are expected before the end of this month, the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration was advised.

The experiment was started late last year, when 400 monkeys were brought from Indo-China, Siam and Sumatra by Columbia University and Puerto Rico School of Tropical Medicine Scientists, who wished to obtain home-grown products for the American medical market. The latter annually demands 50,000 Asian primates for experimental purposes.

The monkeys are given free range of the 36-acre island, under the supervision of Michael Tomlin, formerly of the Philadelphia zoo, who acts as doctor, food dispenser, mayor and chief of police.

Phenomenal success in the propagation has quieted scientists' fears that the change of habitat might stop productivity, or that the new location might not be suitable for the Far Eastern immigrants.

A.F.L. Chiefs Lack Support, Pressman Tells Senators

By the Associated Press

Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, told the Senate Labor Committee yesterday that William Green, A. F. of L. president, and other federation leaders advocating changes in the Wagner act, did not have the support of the A. F. of L. rank and file.

"We speak of these bills as the proposals made by the A. F. of L. executive council, or the top officials of the A. F. of L.," said Pressman, "and we do so advisedly, because it is by now established that despite the approval of Mr. Green these bills have the open and unequivocal opposition of a number of outstanding and important organizations in the A. F. of L. A number of local and regional organizations of the A. F. of L. and a number of established independent unions which have no connections with the C. I. O., such as the railway workers."

Pressman accused A. F. of L. leaders of "incredible gall and the most brazen hypocrisy" in urging the committee to approve changes in the act.

Strike Scheduled For Today in U. S. Cafeterias Averted

A strike of employes in 18 Government department cafeterias scheduled for today, was headed off late yesterday, following a two-hour conference at the Department of Labor.

Stanley White, Labor Department conciliator, announced that an agreement to continue the present union contract for 90 days had been reached by representatives of the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings, which operates the cafeterias, and Local 471 of the United Cafeteria Workers of America.

Capt. F. W. Hoover, general manager of the association, and Jack Mink, business agent of the cafeteria workers local, both credited Assistant Secretary of Labor McLaughlin with obtaining agreement to the 90-day stay.

Negotiations for a new contract, which had reached the stage of a strike vote yesterday, will be resumed about October 1, officials said. The union has sought increased wages and a union shop. Nearly 700 persons are employed in the Government cafeterias, 560 of them members of the union local, officials said.

"What's My Name?"

(Being an impression of a popular radio program.)

Announcer—The young lady who will now have a chance to win ten dollars is Miss Eva Werp, of Staten Island. What do you do, Miss Werp?

Miss Werp—I don't seem to do much of anything except get mixed up in these radio intelligence tests.

Announcer—That's everybody's complaint these days. Now, then, I will outline the facts about an American notable and ask you to give the correct name. I was born in Hollywood. My parents were very lowly and I left them at a very early age and have never seen them since. I have become one of the most famous movie actors in the world. What is my name?

Miss Werp—Dopey, of the Seven Dwarfs?

Announcer—No, and I'll give you some more clews. The first job I ever had was in pictures, and I didn't even take a screen test. I had no influence, and didn't even know Goldwyn. I am the only wealthy movie actor who never had a private swimming pool.

Miss Werp—I give up. Who is it?

Announcer—Mickey Mouse.

Miss Werp—Oh, am I dumb?

Announcer—I'm asking the questions here, not you. Our next victim will be Earl Pinckney, of Bayonne, N. J. What is your business?

Mr. Pinckney—Whatever it is, I feel I have no business here.

Announcer—Ten dollars if you give the name of the person I shall now describe. I never rowed on a Harvard crew. No college ever voted me the most likely to succeed, but I have amassed a fortune in the depression years. What's my name? And I'll give you some more clews. I live in New Jersey, have a business which is entirely a sideline. I have had tremendous publicity lately and I like my beer.

Mr. Pinckney—Governor Dickinson.

Announcer—Governor Dickinson doesn't live in New Jersey and he hates beer.

Mr. Pinckney—I'm just stabbing, I guess.

Announcer—What do you mean "You guess?" Here's a last clew: I don't seem to be able to get my waistline down, my footwork is awful, but I can lick all those big bums.

Mr. Pinckney—I know! Tony Galento. Do I get ten dollars?

Announcer—No, and I should sue you for taking up so much time. Our next bad guesser is Caprice Quoggle, of 456 Main street, Astoria. What do you do, Miss Quoggle?

Miss Quoggle—I'm a student.

Miss Quoggle—I'm studying how to be embarrassed.

Announcer—You won't have to study much longer. Here's the riddle: I didn't amount to much in my youth; in fact, I was practically disowned. Suddenly my legs became the most talked-of legs in America, and I achieved fame and fortune. Who am I?

Miss Quoggle—Fiorello LaGuardia.

Announcer — Mr. LaGuardia's legs are not much.

Miss Quoggle—They must be good to get him around the way they do.

Announcer—You have not only lost the ten-dollar prize, but you owe this program eight dollars.

Miss Quoggle—I give up. What's the answer?

Announcer—Seabiscuit.

Harry James says he went to see the girls in the "Frozen Alive" show at the World's Fair, but couldn't break the ice.

Congressional Unfinished Business

Special Session This Fall May Become Almost Indispensable

By Ernest K. Lindley.

THE ANTI-NEW DEAL coalition has won this battle. But will it win the war? Or even the next battle? Within a few months there will be another passage at arms. The next time the Roosevelt Administration will be armed with an economic and social program bigger and broader than the one that now lies buried or in pieces.

The showdown may well come in November. For unless Congress, in its stampede homeward, miraculously salvages several important bits of legislation from the wreckage now strewn around Capitol Hill, a special session in the fall will become almost indispensable.

The spend-lend bill is only one of four or five major pieces of domestic legislation which have been jammed or mangled.

WPA Restrictions May Cause Storm

THERE IS ALSO the WPA appropriation, which was granted, but with restrictions which lower efficiency and are almost certain to kick up a political storm before the summer has passed.

Thirdly, there is the $800,000,000 housing bill, the fate of which is uncertain as this is written.

Fourth, come the social security amendments, apparently hopelessly deadlocked in conference committee.

In reserve is the national health bill, which the Administration forces made no serious effort to push to final action at this session, but which, in substance, is an integral part of the New Deal program.

Unless the social security amendments are passed before January the old-age insurance taxes will rise by 50 per cent—to the tune of $275,000,000 for the year. Congress, at the next regular session, could "freeze" the taxes at their present rates of 1 per cent each on employer and employe and make the "freezing" retroactive to January 1. If this were done before April 1, the employers, who pay their tax to the Treasury every three months, could be relieved. But how about the workers, whose contributions are deducted monthly, weekly, and, in some cases, daily? Rebates could be made to the some 25,000,000 workers who paid the higher tax, but only at a heavy cost in clerical work.

Special Session May Be Necessary

THIS ALONE is too high a tribute for a muddled Congress to exact from the public. Of course, a simple resolution apart from the rest of the social security amendments could freeze the tax. Such a resolution may be put through before the end of the session.

But there would remain the $65,000,000 in unemployment compensation taxes which would be saved to employers if the pending amendments are adopted now, through limiting the tax to the first $3,000 of an employe's annual income.

There are other changes that cannot be made retroactive by action at the next regular session: the inclusion of 1,300,000 additional workers in the insurance system, the payment of old-age insurance benefits and survivors' benefits beginning January 1, and the host of other improvements in the whole social security system.

The amendments as they stand fall far short of what many New Dealers consider an adequate program. If action is postponed, they are pretty sure to go to bat for more liberal benefits all around. But there are some changes which can't very well wait and which will make a special session necessary unless Congress takes care of them now.

Can't Afford To Wait Until January

IT'S TOO EARLY to forecast what the Administration will do about all the fragments of its shattered spend-lend bill. Parts probably can be handled without specific Congressional authorization. Since the Senate approved parts, and the House didn't vote on the issue, the Administration may feel free to move ahead.

One thing is certain: that if the Administration wants to get economic results in 1940 from the spend-lend bill or anything like it, it cannot afford to wait until the regular session in January. Take, for example, the rehabilitation loans of the Farm Security Administration, which were the largest and fastest-moving part of the program. The purpose of these loans is to put small farmers, tenants, croppers and the like, on their feet. The loans must be made during the winter and very early spring. They cannot wait for action at the regular session.

Most of the rest of the scuttled spend-lend program was slow-moving stuff—as slow moving as the public housing which will be held up for a year if the $800,000,000 USHA bill isn't passed now or in the fall.

Congress obviously needs a "cooling spell." Perhaps when it comes back the anti-New Deal coalition will hold its lines against a revamped and enlarged New Deal economic and social program. If so, the issues for 1940 will be clear-cut. But maybe, when Congress gets home, it will begin to hear from some of the many millions of American citizens whose interests and welfare are adversely affected by what Congress did, or failed to do, about social security, relief, housing and economic recovery.

Italian Troops Disarm Chinese Gang in Shanghai

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shanghai (Friday), Aug. 4.—Italian troops stationed along the border of the International Settlement yesterday seized and disarmed a group of 30 Chinese who had attempted to occupy a Chinese school located in the Japanese-controlled "Bad Lands" area, which borders on the settlement.

The Chinese were followers of Wang Ching-Wei, former premier of the Chinese Nationalist government, who has joined forces with the Japanese and has become a candidate to head a Japanese-controlled government of the conquered Chinese area.

The Italians turned the band over to the Japanese, despite protests from the settlement police, who claimed that the gang was the one which attacked two Chinese newspapers within the settlement two weeks ago.

Graf Zeppelin Seen Off Scotland

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—An airship sighted off the east coast of Scotland this afternoon was identified by two planes from the 612th squadron of the auxiliary air force as the German Graf Zeppelin.

The Zeppelin was about 20 miles east of Aberdeenshire, and was traveling in a northeasterly direction.

Bill Vetoed To Ban Credit By Breweries

Would Prohibit Time Sales Here to Retailers; Craver Fights Liquor Ads

John Barleycorn occupied the spotlight briefly in Washington yesterday when President Roosevelt vetoed a bill to prohibit sale of beer by brewers to District retailers on credit and H. O Craver, of the Petworth Citizens' Association waged a one-man war against all advertising of alcoholic beverages.

Appearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's public hearing, Craver severely criticized an advertisement which appeared last Mother's Day which suggested remembering mother by giving her a bottle of liquor."

On the other hand, representatives of the Neon sign industry, sign painters' union, Washington Hotel Association and the District Retail Liquor Dealers raised questions concerning some of the details of proposed regulations to control advertising.

Opposes Sign Limitation

Leonard J. Ganse, representing the Columbia Neon Sign Co., vigorously opposed one of the proposals which would compel local dealers who now have signs larger than 10 square feet in area to discard them. Milford F. Schwartz, of another Neon sign company, also spoke in opposition.

Ganse said some $1,200,000 has already been invested by local dealers in neon signs and that any attempt to remove them because of the proposed regulations would be confiscatory.

The board decided to grant liquor dealers an opportunity to express themselves on the proposed regulations by letters to the board and set the deadline for August 14.

Objects to Handbill Ban

John A. Bresnahan, representing the Graphic Arts Association of Washington, objected to the prohibition of printed handbills and circulars to advertise alcoholic beverages. William M. Kochenderfer, executive secretary of the Washington Hotel Association, asked whether menus would have to carry the class, type and proof, percentage of neutral spirits of any liquor advertised for sale in hotels and restaurants. One of the regulations requires this in all advertisements.

Other provisions of the regulations, which are based on the code of the Federal Alcohol Administration, would prohibit the use of Santa Claus pictures, religious symbols, nude women, and pictures of children, on liquor advertisement.

The beer bill vetoed by Mr. Roosevelt was sponsored in the Senate by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, anti-New Dealer.

Opposes Type of Legislation

"So far as I can recollect," the President said in his message to Congress, "I know of no legislation which has ever undertaken to order that some special kind of industrial product be sold by the manufacturer solely for cash.

"To establish the principle that retailers must pay cash for any special article opens the door to similar legislation, not only for the District of Columbia but for the entire country, whereby the Congress could select this, that or the other product and command that the manufacturer thereof cease selling it on credit.

"They should continue to sell only to such retailers as they have had good experience with. That is the usual custom adopted by the manufacturers throughout the Nation."

Maid Left Income From $40,000 by Mrs. Plummer

Mrs. Lillian Gertrude Plummer, widow of Edward C. Plummer, former vice chairman of the United States Shipping Board, bequeathed income from an estate of nearly $40,000 to her maid and companion, Anna Pleasanton, according to a will filed for probate in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Plummer, who lived at 1120 Vermont avenue northwest, died July 15 at the age of 80. A native of Maine, she also left small bequests to the Winter Street Congregational Church of Bath, Me., Col. Dummer Seawell Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution, and three nieces in Maine and Kentucky.

Overbuilding Here Foreseen by Lusk

Rufus S. Lusk, chairman of the Taxpayers' Association, yesterday warned against the danger of overbuilding in the District while addressing the Cosmopolitan Club in the Carlton Hotel.

Lusk said that there are 11 per cent vacancies in houses and apartments here, and that the proportion would increase to 17 per cent by November 1. He asserted the Federal slum-clearance program was largely a myth since slum dwellers usually are unable to rent the new housing units. Bert Lansdale was awarded the club's attendance prize.

Mrs. Williston Appointed To Chest Capital Unit

Mrs. Thomas A. Williston has accepted appointment as vice chairman of the Capital Unit for the Community Chest campaign, Nathan A. Dobbins, chairman of the unit, announced last night.

Further plans for unit organization were discussed at a meeting yesterday attended by Mrs. Williston and the following area chairmen: Mrs. Eula Trigg, Mrs. Estelle Dyson, Mrs. Muriel Alexander, Samuel Mathews, John H. Dale, jr., and Miss Sara Moore.

Post Staff Photos.

Proud mothers carried 88 babies to the Wheatley Playground's baby show yesterday. The healthiest one of his age was said to be Carl Sierk, jr., 4 (left), who wants to be a policeman like Capt. Dick Mansfield, of No. 9. Above—King and Queen of the show, Joan Goodrich, 4, and Raoul Jones, 5, receive Lillian Scheer, 3, who had the prize-winning disposition. Right—Kevin Michael Hennessey, 11 months, is strikingly healthy and won a prize for it and a good disposition, too

Gravelly Point Airport Work Half Finished

7,750,000 Cubic Yards Of Gravel Filled In, Col. Thomas Reports

Gravelly Point Airport is half finished.

Col. Robert S. Thomas, District Army engineer, yesterday informed the engineering commission for the $10,000,000 terminal that the halfway mark on hydraulic filling for the model landing field had been passed.

More than 7,750,000 cubic yards of sand and gravel have been taken from the bottom of the river and placed in position and the dike surrounding the area to be occupied by the field was completed Monday, he said.

Water behind the dike is now being pumped out through a spillway and the placing of all 15,500,000 cubic yards on the site will be concluded before January 1, 1940, the scheduled date, Thomas added.

The exceptional progress, he continued, has been made because three big dredges, the Lake Ellendale, Pennsylvania and the Gulf Stream, have been working 24 hours a day, 6 days a week.

Dry fill is being hauled from the hill on the river bank to the area on which the terminal buildings and entrance plaza will be built, he said.

Members of the engineering commission are Col. Sumpter Smith, of the Air Safety Board, chairman; Maj. B. M. Harlow, of the Works Progress Administration; W. E. Reynolds, of the Public Buildings Administration, and Col. Thomas.

C. B. Slemp Sued As Note Indorser

C. Bascom Slemp, one-time Republican power and secretary to President Coolidge, was made a defendant yesterday in an action filed by the Riggs National Bank to collect a $3,000 note, allegedly signed by George A. Nugent and indorsed by Slemp.

Slemp, who served in the House for 14 years from the Ninth Virginia District, became secretary to Coolidge in 1923. He was close to both the Harding and Coolidge Administration and took an active part in the 1928 campaign for Hoover. Both Slemp and Nugent are attorneys here.

Six Weeks of Auto Inspection Averts Disaster for Scores

Precarious Steering Defects Found in Some Cases; Service Also Used by Prospective Used Car Buyers, Has Raised Standards for Repair

Disaster for scores of District motorists has been averted since compulsory inspection of automobiles was begun six weeks ago by discovery of defects which sooner or later would have brought wrecks and possibly violent death.

There was one almost new automobile whose steering mechanism fell apart during inspection. The shocked owner said his wife had been driving the car daily to Frederick, Md.

Another motorist drove into the Southwest inspection station with a 1934 model whose steering wheel could be whirled a turn and a quarter with no appreciable effect on the front wheels. Still another automobile had its steering box held in place by a single bolt and would have careened out of control had this bolt sheered off.

License Discrepancies

Not the least of the by-products of the drive for highway safety through inspection is the discovery that of the approximately 1,600 cars run daily through the city's two inspection stations, 100 are found with serial or motor numbers differing from those recorded on owners' registration cards.

Protection for used car buyers and higher standards of auto repair workmanship are other unexpected results of operation of the stations at Mount Olivet road and West Virginia avenue northeast, and Tenth and F streets southwest.

Tested Before Buying

While no figures on the subject have been tabulated, J. M. Cawood, supervisor of the Southwest station, said yesterday that many prospective used car purchasers are submitting cars to inspection before buying.

Furthermore, drivers whose cars have been rejected subsequent to overhauling, are demanding—and getting—improved mechanical service. Standards for mechanics throughout the city already have been raised, according to J. Earl Steinhaurer, Traffic Bureau statistician.

A total of 30,077 motor vehicles were inspected during July, he said, adding that private automobiles, taxis and trucks in the future will receive their stamps of approval at the rate of 800 a day.

Last month 20,966 passenger cars, 1,140 trucks and 4,350 taxicabs were subjected to the rigorous tests.

Headlights Flunk Most

Improperly adjusted or improperly functioning headlights were the main faults found, Steinhauer asserted. He estimated that 60 per cent of the cars failing to pass inspection were "flunked" on headlights, while 23 per cent failed to pass because their brakes were bad. Steering mechanism failures accounted for 17 per cent.

The schedule for this month calls for testing of cars with license tags ranging from 125-500 to 150-500.

Haitian Leader Impressed by U. S. Cordiality

Dumarsais Estime, Haiti's minister of education and agriculture, will leave Washington for home today, impressed beyond description by the cordiality extended him in the first foreign country he ever visited.

ESTIME

In a "farewell interview" last night at the Haitian Legation, the 40-year-old bachelor statesman expressed his appreciation of the hospitality shown him wherever he went, from the Library of Congress and Government Printing Office to the Agriculture and Interior departments.

M. Estime came to the United States last month primarily to attend the World Poultry Congress in Cleveland. Today he goes to New York.

As minister of education and agriculture, the achievement which gives him the most satisfaction is his launching of a physical education program for the youth of Haiti.

D. C. Man, 68, to Take New Jersey Bride

New York, Aug. 3.—Frank Watson Carpenter, 68, retired, of the United States Soldiers Home, Washington, and Miss Maria Wentworth Bates, 41, of Columbia, N. J., obtained a license to wed here this afternoon. The couple said they would be married later by the New York City clerk. Carpenter was born in Corinth, N. Y. Miss Bates was born in Swampscott, N. J.

7 From D. C. Jailed By West Virginia As 'Dope Peddlers'

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—Judge William G. Baker sentenced seven Washington, D. C., residents to prison in Federal Court today with the warning:

"Let me tell you something. You are in the wrong district. You dope peddlers had better stay out of the northern district of West Virginia."

The prisoners had been convicted or pleaded guilty to conspiracy to violate the narcotic act, and a substantive offense.

George Fairley, Clarence Scott, Oscar Bryant, Booker T. Hunt, and Lorenzo Hopson were given consecutive terms of two and three years in the Leavenworth (Kans.) Prison.

Dollie May Scott and Ruby Hewitt received two years in the Alderson (W. Va.) Prison.

U. S. to Reject China Credit Plan

By International News Service.

The Roosevelt Administration has reluctantly concluded it lacks legal authority to commit this Government to a British-proposed Anglo-French-American credit to support China's currency, it was learned last night.

The State Department, an official said, will shortly dispatch the British a note to this effect. The Department, it was understood, will reaffirm readiness to purchase Chinese silver, or to buy Chinese yuan with the stipulation the Chiang Kai-shek government provide gold collateral.

Senate Votes Annuities To Canal Workers

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a bill granting life annuities to civilian employes who aided in construction of the Panama Canal from 1904 to 1914.

Employes who worked there three years would be given 40 per cent of their salary annually; for four years they would receive 50 per cent and for six years or more 60 per cent. Widows who were with their husbands during any part of the canal service would receive the annuity that would have come to the men.

Bert Fish Confirmed As Minister to Egypt

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Bert Fish, of Florida, as Minister to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, and Edward Gearing Kempt, of Michigan, as an Assistant Attorney General.

Capital News In Brief

Police Charge Hit-Run

Not only did Ulysses C. Bell, 47, colored, of 610 Third street southeast, run against a scout car, according to police, but attempted to leave the scene without identifying himself.

Thus, Bell was charged at Fifth Precinct Station last night with hit-and-run, and with failure to give right of way. Police asserted Bell's auto ran against the rear fender of the scout car at Canal and E streets southeast, and that the police had to give chase for four blocks before arresting Bell.

Auto Fells Pole

Police last night were seeking two men believed to be in need of hospital treatment after their sedan had knocked over a telephone pole at Fifteenth street and Sheriff road northeast. Police and ambulance arrived, to find the automobile and post, but no patients. Witnesses said they saw two men flee after the accident.

Congress Note: Record in Bills Taxes Printers

Unusual Length of Session Is Breaking Production Marks

Up to August 1, a total of 20,926 different bills had been printed since Congress convened January 3. This compares with 10,864 printed last year. Since from 700 to 1,000 copies of each bill are turned out, the total output for this session is nearly 20,000,000.

More than 15,000 pages of the Congressional Record have been printed, compared with 13,550 last year.

Undoubtedly a Record

The 20,926 bills printed undoubtedly constitute an all-time record, said William A. Mitchell, the GPO's superintendent of planning, who explained that he has not yet delved into the statistics to determine what other marks have been broken.

Although the imminent adjournment of Congress will bring the Congressional Record to a temporary finish, plenty of work remains to prevent any layoffs, asserted Edward M. Nevils, production manager.

One of the biggest orders to be filled is the printing of the code of Federal regulations in 25 volumes of 1,000 pages each. Congress appropriated $450,000 for this job, which will present for the first time in a single collection all White House and departmental orders and regulations from George Washington's day to the present.

Mother of Two Is Locked in Room As Dress Burns

A 40-year-old mother of two children was in critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night after her clothes had been burned from her body.

Mrs. Mae Pearson was found in the bedroom of her home, 621 Twenty-third street northwest, by her husband, Robert. Pearson, police said, had to break open a locked door to reach his wife and extinguish the flames. She suffered second and third degree burns.

Earlier, according to police, Mrs. Pearson had purchased a quart of kerosene "to clean some brushes."

Boys' 'Y' Starts Drum, Bugle Corps

Boy members of the Central Y. M. C. A. are organizing their own drum and bugle corps, under direction of Johan Van Zuylen, artist and musician, and plan to make their debut when the Boys Department holds its fall opening night ceremonies at the "Y" next month.

The boys who now belong to the corps are Charles Thorne, Jack Brown, James Walters, Graham Renner, Ralph Bevins, Charles Kinchen, Jackie Yeager and Scotty Atwill. A total of 20 is sought by Y. M. C. A. officials.

Drama Students Await Curtain Call at C. U. Tonight

Post Staff Photos.

A dress rehearsal for "A Joyous Season," religious play, was held last night by speech and drama students at Catholic University who will appear tonight in the university gym. Left—Bernard J. McConnell, make-up instructor, assists Marion Wolberg, who plays Monica, as Margaret Riseling, portraying Edith, watches. Right—Margaret Mary Edmonston, as Terry, kneels before Mary Agnes Bier, who plays Sister Christina in the lead role in a dramatic scene from the play

The Cast Is Announced For 'Going Native' Revue

Producer Ford Assembles Array of Talent; Everybody but Betty Grable Gets Hot; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE SEVENTH annual edition of the "Going Native" revue, to be staged at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of Friday, August 18, rapidly is taking shape. The roster of principals has been chosen by Producer Gene Ford and his associates and the chorus personnel is apt to have been determined by the time this appears in print.

Featured among the stellar acts will be Evelyn Foster, recently selected as "Miss Washington" to compete in the "Miss America" beauty contest at Atlantic City next month, and the Sylvia Kaplowitz Accordion Septet, which dropped out of last year's revue at the last moment due to unfortunate circumstances that could not be circumvented.

BELL

Miss Foster, it turns out, is a dancer of marked ability in addition to being a charming personality well equipped to represent the Capital at the shore. The Kaplowitz Septet is comprised of Antoinette Charahaus, Miss Kaplowitz, Harriet Okum, Frances Reich, Gertrude Betts, Bernadette Crouch—a brilliant soprano as well as accordioniste—and Iris Grassel.

Others who will adorn the new all-Washington production include the German-American Band, seven musically inclined students from Catholic University, who "stole" the recent auditions; Tom, Dick and Harry, a talented trio, composed of George Hase, Thomas Hier and Harry Hier; George Williams, cartoonist; Edward Dargan and Elizabeth Guthridge, Marjorie King, hit vocalist from the 1937 revue; Dorothy Walsh, Banks A. Murray, jr., a young "man-about-town" with a flair for comedy, and Robert Youmans, Capitol usher, whose specialty is the xylophone.

There still remains to be announced the identity of the master of ceremonies who will preside over all this resident talent and keep the show in motion. We ought to know soon.

The appearance at the Olney next week of Lucia Lull, who played the role of Cindy Lou throughout the three-month run of the comedy in Chicago, instead of Helen Claire, who originated the part here last fall when "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" opened the season at the National Theater, is due to several causes. Miss Claire, it seems, at first was not interested in the summer theater and then changed her mind and seemed to fancy the engagement at Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's Olney playhouse. Her final stipulation, however, was that several members of the original cast be engaged with her. That would have entailed the laying off of virtually the entire resident cast that has done such commendable work in support of Helen Twelvetrees, Karen Morley, Kitty Carlisle, Dennis King and Mitzi Green since the Olney season opened. Miss Lull laid down no such rigid fiat. Hence, etc.

Mr. Cochran, incidentally, is living up to his promise of a representative succession of guest stars in stalwart fashion. Following next week's engagement of Miss Lull in the Clare Booth comedy, Ruth Chatterton will be seen at the "South's only professional summer theater" in "You Can't Eat the Goldfish." Negotiations are now under way for the booking of stars for the ensuing two weeks. On September 4, Clifton Webb and Libby Holman will come to the Olney in a revival of Jed Harris' production of "Burlesque." With indications of a late opening of the regular season, Mr. Cochran has it in the back of his mind to keep the Olney open well into the month of October.

Personal aside to Dudy and Den Dickerson: Thanks for your letter. That's what makes hoss racin'.

If you heard a concord of sweet sound emanating from the top windows of the Raleigh Hotel yesterday afternoon, that was Frankie Masters and His Orchestra, one of the three stellar acts on the new stage bill at the Earle Theater, rehearsing with Betty Grable and Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, the other two, last seen here with Jack Benny on the screen in "Man About Town."

Betty and "Rochester" arrived in town from Hollywood yesterday morning at 8:50 and went directly about the business of whipping their acts into shape for opening day of the first week of what started out to be a four-week tour and now has expanded to twice that length. Eddie Anderson, Mr. Benny's droll colored valet on the air and in the celluloids, has never appeared in person in Washington before. He will present an act that will embrace a few "bits" from the Benny picture and a lot of "new stuff."

The blond and vivacious Miss Grable has not been seen on a Washington stage in something like two years and a half—since the time, in other words, when she and Jackie Coogan starred in that "Hollywood Revue" at Loew's Capitol. She has ambitious plans for the future. Having been more or less "pushed around" in unsatisfactory screen roles while under studio contract in Hollywood, she welcomes this tour before living audiences as a "tune-up" exercise for which she has been engaged in the fall. Ethel Merman probably will be in the same cast and Buddy DeSylva will be the producer. In addition to her singing and dancing, Betty will have a real part in this production, according to every present outlook.

It would be interesting to know how Betty handles this heat wave the way she does. With Production Manager Harry Anger, Frankie Masters, Dan Terrell, "Rochester" and all the rest of us splattering perspiration all over Mrs. Raleigh's main ballroom, the imperturbable Miss Grable looked, and apparently was, as cool as that much publicized cucumber. They say she looked that way when she got off the train and had looked that way ever since.

It's a good trick, even if you can't do it!

It was a picture of the first rank that they saw when a considerable midnight audience sat in on a preview screening of Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "Stanley and Livingstone" Wednesday night at the Columbia Theater. More of this later—probably Sunday. And that reminds me.

Word-to-the-Wise Note

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Aug. 3.

Paul Green, the Pulitzer Prize playwright who is working at Roanoke Island, is refusing all offers to return to Hollywood. Green went from his native North Carolina to the film colony to earn $104,000 in one year—enough to pay off the mortgages for every one of his relatives—which he did. Katharine Cornell has refused the most attractive offer ever made by any film studio—the right to choose her own story, director, cast, as well as a salary higher than Garbo's . . . Tamara Geva, taking her auto-driving test, was asked by the examiner: "How fast do you drive on a play street?" Miss Geva said "10 miles an hour—very slowly," and now is lamenting her mistake. No driving is permitted on a play street.

George S. Kaufman, who still is afraid of planes, is recruiting new members for his "Darwin-Was-Right-Club" . . . Monty Woolley, the bearded Yale professor who became an actor, is urging all his Broadway colleagues to follow his suit, and grow a beard. "Men," he explains, "ought to defy women by raising something which they cannot—outside of a circus."

The original manuscripts of Thomas Wolfe's posthumous novels will be purchased soon, for exhibition probably at the J. P. Morgan Library or at Harvard. The value of these manuscripts is enhanced by the fact that they are written in longhand . . . Wolfe, before he died, told me why he preferred writing 3,000 words a day in longhand, instead of using the typewriter: He was descended from pioneers, and was proud that his forebears were men of the soil . . . "But I went to Harvard, and taught English at N. Y. U.," he stated, "and the men in our family all worked with their hands—hands which were gnarled and worn from toil. So look" . . . He showed his own hands—the fingers lumped and gnarled, like those of a man of the soil—there, where he held his pencil.

Gummo Marx, fifth of the Marx Bros., confided to Harpo that he would like to rejoin the family act. "Nothing doing," Harpo told him. "When you were with us before, you became known as America's slowest whirlwind dancer" . . . Larry Hart, who with Dick Rodgers is writing the music for the new show, "Yale Bait," lost the manuscript of the show's book, which was written by George Marion. Marion therefore is doing the rewriting now . . . Jack Waldron is boasting that he has so many gold teeth that he sleeps with his head in a safe . . . Percy Marmont, star of the silent screen and of "If Winter Comes," will join the ranks of the comeback-triers.

Jack Haley is parading around town wearing three medals under his coat . . . "This first one I got for jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge," he announced, "and the second medal is for jumping back" . . . "And what's the third medal for?" an incredulous listener asked . . . "That's also for jumping back, from the river to the Bridge," Haley told him. "I couldn't make it in one jump."

Irving Berlin, who now is in Hollywood, was asked: "What makes men of genius so forgetfull." Berlin answered: "I forget" . . . That much-publicized sale of the Otto Kahn estate to the Department of Sanitation was not for $100,000 cash, as the front-pages reported. The department gave a $100,000 mortgage to the Kahn heirs—and if the property should be deemed not free from taxation, and if the sanitation heads are unable to make it profitable, the property will revert to the Kahns . . . Julie Jenner, of the Ziegfeld shows, is taking drama lessons from Maria Ouspenskaya, the famous drama teacher, who begins her lessons with pantomime instruction. "Your car is stuck on the desert, because you've run out of gas," Ouspenskaya directed. "Act it" . . . Miss Jenner started to leave the theater, and was asked: "Where are you going?" "To get some gas," she explained.

Suffer Pangs of Love Second Week

LEWIS STONE, MICKEY ROONEY, CECILIA PARKER as they appear in three of the leading roles in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," latest of the "Hardy Family" series, now in its second week at Loew's Palace Theater. Helen Gilbert and Terry Kilburn are new and valuable additions to the familiar cast

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 3.—With Ned Sparks traveling 3,000 miles from Toronto to speak seven words for an added scene in "The Star-maker" and John Halliday clipper-shipping from Honolulu to do retakes on another one, producers are trying to think up a clause which will keep their pigeons home till after press preview.

HOPPER

On the other hand, there's nothing quite so good as travel to land you a job. Peggy Woods was telephoned in mid-Atlantic to play the housekeeper in "The Housekeeper's Daughter." She got here and found the company shooting without a script.

Vivian Tobin hadn't landed from her honeymoon trip around the world when she also got a summons to play the best part she's done in pictures with Fay Bainter in "Our Neighbors, the Carters." Wonder when they'll change that title? I know lots of people who wouldn't go inside a theater to look at a neighbor.

After showing America how easy it was to start a crime wave, most of our film gangsters became G-men. It's now taken three studios to successfully regenerate the Dead End kids. And Arthur Lubin has the ticklish job at Universal in "Call in a Messenger."

I thought Binnie Barnes had joined a nudist camp, but she'd just been to Norconia, where she got the best tan in town. She was on her way to the ball game, where she takes over the microphone and broadcasts a couple of innings.

On the Universal lot, I found the impeccable Basil Rathbone perched on a mud bank of a pond filled with brackish, green water. He was just about to swim through. Basil wore a ten days growth of beard, his hair was matted and wind tossed and he wore a filthy, mud packed garment, neither suit nor undies—just rags. He made Laughton, as the Hunch Back, look well dressed by comparison. And, of all things, he was playing a European banker escaping into the jungle from a penal colony in Rio. Proving that crime doesn't pay these days.

Who was it said girls marry fashion designers because they keep them in stitches?

Flora Robson and Dolly Haas, after the freedom of English tweeds, are having hobble skirt trouble.

I was certain that after the recent suicide of a woman who had spent her vacation at a nudist camp, the movies would catch up with the nudists again. They did. And again ran true to form. The head of the camp made the director, cameraman and crew denude themselves before they could shoot anything. Which happened exactly the same way when they made a nudist picture a few years ago. After two days shooting, they had to give the boys a day off to nurse their sunburn.

Billie Burke hung up a record. She brought every gown Travis Banton designed for her in "Eternally Yours." Mae West wants him to simonize her for that Western.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 3 (DS).—Theodore Dreiser took one look at the test Harry Edington made of Angna Enters, one of the world's foremost pantomime dancers, and said "There is your 'Sister Carrie.'" Being the author of this much-discussed novel, Dreiser will naturally be consulted by Edington when he is ready to film the story—and, up to now, it looks as if Miss Enters is leading the procession.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The Hays office officially passed "Sister Carrie" with only a few requested changes. Should Miss Enters sign a contract, it will be her first motion picture. She is so well-known, both here and abroad, that her appearance in movies should be an asset.

That turbulent Russian, Gregory Ratoff, who acts all the scenes he directs and works harder than any ten people, will spend his vacation in a sanitarium. No, Greg isn't sick. Just tired. He went right into "Intermezzo" from "Hotel for Women" without a day's rest and feels he will find a better haven away from Hollywood, where he has so many friends. Important that he feel fit by September 1, for Darryl Zanuck has given him Sonja Henie's picture, "Everything Happens at Night," to direct and Greg wants to keep up his record of good pictures. He has rented Bebe Daniels' beach house and when he returns from his three weeks of seclusion, moves to the quietude of Santa Monica.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bruce Cabot sailed on the Manhattan a week ago, without telling any of his Hollywood friends; Loretta Young and Broderick Crawford having more fun at Earl Carroll's, with Broderick having eyes for no other gal; the Ernie Paganos have a date with the stork. He is a well-known Hollywood writer; Greta Garbo is living at her favorite hotel in Santa Monica while she's making her picture. Talk is that she expects to leave for Europe as soon as she finishes; A. C. Blumenthal taking Mrs. Jim Farley and a group of friends on a tour of Hollywood after the Corinne Griffith Marshall dinner; Rosalind Russell is on her way to New York on a holiday and a visit with her sister; Carole Lombard has been sick for several days and will go under observation when she finishes her picture; Mrs. Lois Pantages is in the Good Samaritan Hospital with a broken arm, the result of a bad fall on her yacht.

Reginald Gardiner and Frances Robinson, a new Trocadero twosome; Edgar Bergen and Marjorie Reid, serious, or just putting on that hand-holding contest to amuse the visiting firemen; Dorothy Lee and Bob Rothafel again a ringside pair at Slapsie Maxie's; Ernst Lubitsch has been limited to three cigars a day, and he couldn't be more unhappy; Vince Barnett and Col. Roscoe Turner have been booked as a vaudeville team, with Vince playing the flier's mechanic; they start out on tour after the Cleveland air races. Conrad Nagel has moved to Malibu for the rest of the summer.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Roast Beef, Corn on Cob Hit the Spot

Meat From Sunday Dinner May Be Used In Many Ways for Easy Meals Later

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

Martha Ellyn

A TENDER, juicy roast of beef and succulent roasting ears—what a treat! It is just the combination to choose for Sunday dinner when corn is in season. And it is a wise choice, too, because when a large roast of beef is cooked, it can be used cold for sandwiches or in dozens of other ways for easy meals when needed during the following week.

Roast beef is easily prepared for all there is to do is place it in the oven and let it cook at a low temperature (300 degrees F) until it is done. When the oven temperature is low, as it always should be, the roast requires no watching whatever. In roasting a standing rib of beef, the meat should be placed fat side up, rib bones down, in an open roasting pan. When the bones are placed down, these form a rack to keep the meat out of the juices so no trivet is necessary. With the fat side up, it is not necessary to baste the roast by hand, for the basting is done effectively as the fat melts and runs down over the meat.

Use Meat Thermometer

The best way to tell when a roast is done is by the use of a meat thermometer. This is inserted into the roast before it is put into the oven. The thermometer is placed so that the bulb reaches the center of the largest part. It registers the temperature on the inside of the roast which can be interpreted in degree of doneness. Lacking a meat thermometer, the best guide to doneness is the time-weight relationship, although it is only an approximate way of telling when a roast is done. According to the time-weight relationship, allow 18 to 20 minutes per pound for a rare roast, 22 to 25 minutes per pound for a medium roast, and 28 to 30 minutes per pound for a well-done roast of beef.

There are many ways to use the part of a roast of beef which is left over from the Sunday dinner. Here are two:

Roast Beef in Barbecue Sauce

1 medium-sized onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 small bottle ketchup
3 tablespoons Worchestershire sauce
½ tablespoon mustard
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup water

Brown the onion in butter, add remaining ingredients and cook until slightly thickened. Reheat roast beef in this sauce.

Roast Beef Rolls

Sliced roast beef
4 slices bacon
2 tablespoons finely diced onion
2 cups breadcrumbs
Meat broth or hot water
Salt and pepper

Cut bacon into small pieces and brown together with finely diced onion. Combine with bread crumbs and moisten with meat broth or hot water. Season with salt and pepper. Pile a spoonful of this dressing on each slice of roast beef. Roll and fasten with toothpicks. Lay in a baking dish and pour over it left-over gravy. Cook for 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Zestful Twosome for Sunday Dinner

Need you worry about what to have for dinner when you can picture the taste thrill that goes with a juicy beef roast accompanied by the fresh-from-the-garden touch of corn on the cob? This is a combination that will find few equals for a Sunday dinner in August

Advice on Food

'Raspberries in Snow' Will Cool Palate These Hot Days

Consumers Counsel comprises suggestions sent in by The Post readers. If you have any ideas you would like to share, send them to Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor. Any interesting suggestions of practical value throughout the household will be welcomed.

GREAT COOKS welcome summer. Its abundance is unequaled by any other season, and appetites, heat-weary, all the more appreciate foods that are arrestingly good. Out of The Post's mail bag comes some delightfully cool suggestions for summer food.

You may not be able to paint the lily successfully, but you can make an iced drink by just that name—Orange Lily. Mrs. Grace F. Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota avenue northeast, sent in a recipe which you will want in your summer drink list.

Orange Lily

Fill a tall glass half full of shaved ice and add ½ cup white grape juice and 1 teaspoon sugar and 2 tablespoons orange juice. Fill glass with chilled water. Serve with two straws thrust through a thin slice of orange. The above amount will make 1 glass full.

Tea does heavy summer duty as a foundation for ice-tingling combinations. Fruit tea punch has social poise and Miss Sylvia Klein's choice is Honolulu tea, which she writes is a different drink.

Honolulu Tea

To 2 quarts of strong cold tea, add the juice of 6 lemons, 2 cups crushed pineapple with its sirup, 1 cup maraschino cherries with their sirup and a sirup made by boiling together 2 cups sugar and 1 cup water for 5 minutes. Chill and serve with cracked ice. This quantity will serve about 20 people.

Those most fussy about summer desserts cannot forego "raspberries in snow," made according to recipe developed by Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest. Anything with such sweet persistency as the raspberry, deserves to be eaten with a golden spoon and in leisurely fashion, too.

Raspberries in Snow

Wash 2 cups fresh raspberries and chill. Whip 1 cup whipping cream until it begins to thicken and combine with 3 teaspoons chopped mint leaves, and 1 teaspoon Angostura bitters. Chill. At serving time, turn cream into a crystal bowl. Cover with raspberries and top with 1 cup of coconut.

French vegetable cutter, or diced or be scooped out in large spoonfuls. Wipe out the salad bowl with cut side of garlic. Line with crisp lettuce leaves. Arrange with 1 pint of berries, the cantaloupe

Food Hints on Holding Your Man

We all have a healthy curiosity about everything that has to do with celebrities. We like to know what they wear, what their favorite activities are, all about their pets, and what their ideas are on many subjects.

It has been said the turnpike road to people's hearts lie through their mouths. If you are interested in knowing the foods to serve to put a sparkle of pleasure in "his" eyes, read about the favorite foods of prominent men in Washington which will soon appear on the Women's Page of The Washington Post.

or honeydew balls. Serve with sour cream mayonnaise. To make the mayonnaise, fold ½ cup sour cream, which has been whipped, 2½ tablespoons confectioner's sugar, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice into ½ cup mayonnaise. Makes 1½ cups mayonnaise.

Berry Melon Salad Bowl

Do you want to know how to make a salad than can brighten up your summer menus? With berries and melons at the high season, and the recipe sent us by Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, you can be assured of a new salad delight. Miss Ryan writes: "All melons should be served very cold. The pulps of cantaloupe and melon may be shaped in balls with Mrs. E. E. Smith, 868 Park avenue, Baltimore, is one always to be in step with the procession of fresh fruits and vegetables. With the delicious plums arriving in the markets you will like Mrs. Smith's use of the blue plums to make a refrigerator dessert.

Plum Refrigerator Cake

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatin in ¼ cup cold water for 5 minutes. Place over hot water until the gelatin is dissolved. Remove from the fire and add ½ cup sugar, ½ tablespoon lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Fold in 1 cup of stewed, sweetened blue plums. Place in the refrigerator until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in ¾ cup cream stiffly whipped. Strips of sponge cake are used to line the bottom and sides of a small deep cake pan. Stale sponge cake will be more satisfactory than the fresh baked variety. Put a layer of the plum mixture over the cake, then add another layer of the cake strips, and alternate the filling and cake layers until all is used. Cake should form the top layer. Place in refrigerator over night to set.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Breast Development by Natural Means Safer Than Plastic Surgery or Massage

WE hear a great deal today about plastic surgery for the breast. In case of deformity of any kind, plastic surgery is a great blessing - - but there are comparatively few instances of true deformity of the breasts.

In the hands of a skilled surgeon the operation is quite simple. But it should be undertaken only upon the advice of the family physician or on the council of a physician recommended by the county medical society. There are too many unscrupulous people who will urge this operation even though it is unnecessary.

Since the mammary glands are so mysterious, it is easy to believe in the promise of magical lotions and gadgets. Numerous lotions and solutions "guarantee" to normalize the bust.

Massage Is Dangerous

In general, these may be grouped as astringents and ointments. The astringents are supposed to firm a sagging contour, but they merely tone the skin and the effect is temporary. Cold water dashed over the breasts makes an inexpensive astringent which also stimulates the circulation.

The creams usually proclaim that they will develop the bust. They contain a lubricant which softens the skin. There is no such thing as a "nourishing" cream. Nourishment can be absorbed only through the blood stream. No external application will develop—or reduce—the bust.

Now we come to massage. There is a theory, and some medical authorities seem to favor it, that gentle massage will encourage normal development. The efficacy of massage lies in its improvement of the circulation which, in turn, nourishes the tissues. Any attemp to reduce the size of the breasts through massage is considered ineffectual and dangerous. Massage vigorous enough to break down the fatty tissues would also affect the more delicate tissues of the same area.

Little Padding Helps

Some figures are one-sided, but fortunately, if the difference is marked, it can be ingeniously concealed. The slight side can be built up with a bit of padding or with a "gay deceiver" designed for wear inside the bra. The naturally flat-chested girls will also find that a little padding is a great help to their figures.

The new uplift brassieres are marvelous! They lift and control without binding or breaking down the tissues. Women should have had them 20 years ago!

If you have a stooping posture or your weight is far from normal it will take more than ingenuity to solve your problem. In this case the problem must be part of a general plan to acquire a gracefully erect carriage. In the process of straightening the shoulders, the pectoral muscles of the busts will be strengthened and that in itself will give a better contour.

Today's Health Talk

Warning Is Issued Against Eating Of Jimson Weed

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Jimson weed grows as a wild plant all over the United States, except in the desert regions. It is very poisonous to all animals. Careless habits of feeding and chewing leaves of plants along the roadside or in the fields have resulted in cases of poisoning over and over again.

A typical example of jimson weed poisoning was reported by two physicians in Memphis, Tenn. A boy aged 13 suddenly became delirious, threshed around, and was so unmanageable that he was brought to the hospital. It was 24 hours before he had calmed down enough to tell a coherent story. Then he said that he had been walking through a field and idly plucked the leaves of a plant and chewed them. Within 10 minutes he began to feel drunk and dizzy and was barely able to make his way home. Then he completely lost consciousness.

Danger Widespread

The jimson weed grows so widely in the United States that such an occurrence might happen to anybody. The weed should be recognized and its identity should be taught in public schools.

It is a large, coarse herb which grows to the height of three to six feet. Its branches spread out until they attain a width almost as great as its height. It has large, angular leaves and a white flower which gives off a strong, sweet smell. After the blooming of the flowers they turn into seed capsules the size of a walnut, covered with sharp, prickly spines. When ripe, this seed vessel opens in four valve-like directions and allows the seeds to fall out.

All parts of this plant are poisonous, roots, leaves, flowers, but the seeds are the most so. The active ingredient is stramonium, which affects the nervous system, causing great mental excitement and agitation.

Simple Treatment

The treatment is to empty the stomach and bowels and to use sedatives to quiet the delirium.

The lesson which each of you can learn from this account is to look up the plate on poisonous plants in Webster's dictionary and learn them to recognize them. It seems strange that in our schools they still teach a mass of perfectly useless knowledge, but do not attempt to instruct human beings in matters that immediately affect their lives and health.

Lively Main Dishes

Stuffed peppers are lively summer main-dishers. Fill them with any thick, savory creamed fish, vegetable or meat and bake about 25 minutes in a moderate oven. You can stuff tomatoes with corn, creamed chicken or beef and when baked 25 minutes you'll have an ultra smart hot dish. Try adding some chili sauce or Russian dressing to any of these creamed foods for a little peppy touch.

Health in Fruits

The body needs vitamin C to help keep up tissues and to maintain healthy gums. Lack of this vitamin over quite a long period may bring about loss of appetite, fatigue and soreness of joints and muscles. Half a grapefruit or one large orange a day will supply this vitamin.

Summer Comes Easily to Some Rooms

White and Green Chintz Slipcovers and Curtains Do Trick

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT would be pretty swell if we all could simply draw the curtain over our household scene, shift it around a bit and when the curtain goes up again, as it does in the theater, have an entirely new picture for the summer months. But such a change takes more money than most of us feel we can devote to seasonal freshening up. So we are more interested in how to achieve the effect of a new picture without actually doing very much.

We saw the idea worked out recently in an eighteenth century room which retained its original winter background and yet looked very cool and fresh for summer. The walls were papered in a terra cotta striped design and the woodwork was natural pine and there was also a pine fireplace. The future consisted of a pine break-front bookcase and odd tables, along with the usual array of upholstered furniture. The rug was a beige tone that was almost the identical color of the honey-toned pine.

In winter the upholstery is predominantly in browns and terra cotta colors, with lamps and accessories in green for accent. In summer curtains and slipcovers are mostly green which makes all the difference in the world in the coolness and transquillity of the room during the hot weather.

The curtains are leafy green, as is the sofa, and a pair of easy chairs in white chintz with green leaves in the pattern are placed side by side with their backs to the fireplace. The pine mantel makes quite a decorative frame for this pair of chairs, while they, in turn, keep it from looking so forlorn in its off-season. Another chair is upholstered in this crisp white and green chintz, and so without any basic backgroud change the room becomes cool and leafy.

Eggnog in Pie Gives New Angle to Treat

Eggnog is the symbol of cordial greeting at Christmas. But there is a summer version which is as correspondingly good as the Yuletide one, although not served from the Wassail bowl, but as a delicious pie.

Eggnog Pie

Heat 1¼ cups milk, 1 cup water and ⅛ teaspoon salt in double boiler. Beat 3 egg yolks, add ¾ cup sugar and beat again. Dissolve 1 envelope gelatine in 3 tablespoons hot water, add to milk and egg mixture and scald. When cool, beat to make mixture fluffy and add 3 beaten egg whites, ½ pint cream, whipped, and 1 teaspoon rum flavoring and 1 teaspoon nutmeg. Pour into baked pie shell and chill.

Golden Brown Fried Chicken With Spicy Flavor Summer Winner

Appetizing Food Does Much To Dispel Heat

Season Permits A Wide Scope In Fancy Foods

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

LOVELY VIEWS, cool breezes and appetizing food can do much to make a gay summer meal when heat and humidity is the news of the day. A meal served either on the porch or in the garden can do much to arrest the most jaded appetite. Recipes such as submitted in this week's Post recipe contest are just the answer if coolness is your motto and leisure your aim.

Hot Weather Inspiration

Fried chicken all golden brown with a delicate yet distinctive spicy flavor co-stars with Turkish Coffee Cake on Mrs. Mary Doyle's winning menu—Outdoor Summer Supper. Mrs. Doyle, who lives at 3425 R street northwest, is the winner of the first prize and an award of $3 for her summer symphony.

Iced Tea or Coffee

Deviled Fried Chicken

Prepare a 3 to 3½-pound chicken for frying. Sift ¾ cup flour, 3 teaspoons dry mustard, 3 teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon black pepper. Dip pieces of chicken first in milk, then in flour mixture. Fry in half shortening or salad oil and half butter or margarine, adding 1 tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and 1 clove of garlic to the fat. When the chicken is golden brown and almost tender, drain off most of fat and set pan of chicken, uncovered, in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., for about 20 minutes. Drain on paper towels before serving.

'One Hot Dish' Meal

Summer allows wide scope for fancy in foods. Some serve the main course hot, some serve it cold. Miss Jean Frantz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, serves the first course hot and the next one jellied on her Garden Supper Menu, and wins the second prize of $2 for her menu and recipes.

Jellied Shrimp and Crabmeat Salad

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatin in ¼ cup cold water for 5 minutes, add 1½ cups boiling water, stir until dissolved, add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ¼ cup vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon cayenne and ½ teaspoon onion grated. Chill until partially set. Add 1 can or jar of shrimp, 1 small can crabmeat, ¾ cup sliced stuffed olives and ½ cup diced celery. Mix well, pour into mold and chill until set. Unmold on platter with lettuce. Makes 4 servings.

Social Note

A watermelon's sole duty is to please the eye and offer cooling refreshment. Of course the watermelon also contains portions of vitamins A, B, C and G which is a rare combination for fruit. Mrs. F. F. Rowe, 5520 Fourth street northwest, suggests the watermelon as party fare. For her distinctive use of the melon she wins a $1 prize.

MRS. ROWE

Watermelon Trumps

Using card-shaped cooky cutters, cut out two forms of watermelon for each portion of salad needed. Cut the watermelon one-half inch thick. Blend 3 tablespoons chopped nuts into two 3-ounce packages cream cheese and spread on the heart, club, diamond and spade shapes. Cover with the matching forms and top with a cherry. Place in the refrigerator to chill and when ready to serve place on lettuce hearts and serve with saltines. This recipe makes 8 servings.

Frozen Harvest

The traditional roasting ear is a favorite vegetable. Mrs. M. Hook, 813 Douglas street northeast, further enhances it by serving it as a frozen salad, and for her novel idea wins a prize of $1. With sweet corn season in full swing in August you will want to try her recipe for your porch and garden meals.

MRS. HOOK

As an escort to cold cuts, or served alone in splendor, the Frozen Corn Salad will sound a note for warm weather entertaining.

Frozen Corn Salad

Grate or finely chop 1½ cooked green corn or use a high grade can corn. To this add 1½ cups thin cream, which has been scalded in top of double boiler. Thicken with 2 beaten eggs and add ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar and ¼ teaspoon paprika. Chill thoroughly and then freeze in refrigerator tray. When half frozen stir in ½ cup salted almonds, coarsely shredded. Cut in squares and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Scout Fashion

Mrs. Phillip Buck, Seminary Hill, Alexandria, is a guardian of Camp Fire Girls. Her idea of baking biscuits in the open wins for her a $1 prize. Mrs. Buck writes: "For a decided change and treat try Bread-on-a-Stick. These are regular baking powder biscuits and wound cornucopia fashion on the end of a well washed green stick and baked at an outdoor fireplace. Turn the stick over frequently so that all sides bake a golden brown, about 7 minutes. They are flaky and delicious. When we bake them we have ready a tray of assorted fillings. A piece of butter for each cornucopia, of course, then a choice of jam, tiny hot sausages, little canned frankfurters, soft cheese and deviled ham. In summer we do them outdoors or over the glowing coals of living room fireplace for informal Sunday tea in cold weather. The dough may be rolled out and cut into rounds several hours in advance and kept in the refrigerator. The following recipe is doubled or tripled as is needed.

MRS. BUCK

Biscuit Dough

Sift 2 cups bread flour, measure and add ½ teaspoon salt, and 2¼ teaspoons baking powder and sift again. Add 4 tablespoons shortening and cut in with a fork or a pastry blender. Add ¾ to 1 cup of milk or buttermilk and mix carefully. Turn onto a floured board. Roll and cut into 3-inch rounds ready for baking.

The opening note for the porch supper, pictured above, is played with melon ball cocktail accentuated with lime and mint. Gay table mats woven of cellulose film, striped with contrasting stitching, crystal dishes and the centerpiece of corn flowers all provide a summery note for the meal, to be served with lots of fresh air

Tallulah Bankhead Becomes Baseball Fan; Gives Giants an After-Theater Party; Free Dancing in Central Park for Kids

New York, Aug. 3.

THAT UNPREDICTABLE ball of fire from Alabama, Tallulah Bankhead, who practically has both houses of Congress in her compact, has suddenly taken a new tack this summer. Starring happily in her great stage hit, "The Little Foxes," Talloo has suddenly become one of the most ecstatic baseball fans in our city. In fact, she and Mr. Jack White, the zany comic who has a night club on Swing Alley, or Fifty-second Street, are now about the most ferocious followers of our National League team, the Giants—"Jints" to the real New Yorker.

ALICE HUGHES

I don't yet know what brought this on, but there it is. Talloo has taken up the Jints in a very constructive way—and the poor blokes need some attention, for they have been having a vile season of it. During the last home stand of the club the star gave the entire team a party in the upstairs lounge of the National Theater, where she is playing. And it was a sight to see the young athletes gaping admiringly at Miss Bankhead, for most of them were meeting a dramatic star for the first time. Tallulah was wearing a suit of blue silk lounging pajamas which fitted her very quickly indeed, and was a pleasant sight to see.

The diamond heroes drank only beer, and not very much of that, and most of them insisted on taking the brew right out of the bottle—an old ball-players' custom. It was obvious that Miss B. was having one of the times of her life, talking incessantly in that guttural voice and employng her Alabama accent to the full, which was a bit confusing to some. For instance, when she wanted to talk to Mr. Joe Moore, a Jint outfielder, she called "Jaw Maw"! And Mr. Maw came right over to greet the little lady.

Tallulah's party was a real hit. For the first time the actors, the ball-players and the Broadwayites got together in a social way, and it was fun.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: I've seen many a foot-conscious woman carry a spare pair of shoes out to the Fair. They sit down on the benches nearest the gate, take off their stylish pumps and put on a pair of comfortable flat-heeled brogans they've been carrying. No bad notion, either.

A pretty Chinese girl named Li Fung Oye, who sings in a Chinatown cafe at the Fair, designs gowns, hats, and even jewelry when not engaged in vocalism. She says her Chinese name means Peacock of Love—and who of us can deny that?

For real fun, I recommend that you watch the youngsters doing their free dancing twice a week on the concrete Mall in Central Park. The kids have a wonderful time, though this year they are hoofing under stiffish rules. That is, the lads must wear coats and take off their hats, no smoking is permitted on or around the dance area, and two girls cannot dance together. A bit tough, hey? The attendance, on a fine evening, is over 5,000 and the band plays "Good Night, Ladies" at 10:30. A great institution, this.

I SAW Jane Cowl buying jewelry to wear in her next play, "Easy Virtue," the other day. She was wearing a navy blue sheer dress, with a three-quarter swagger coat to match, and the costume was untrimmed save for a big bunch of red roses at one shoulder. Looked very regal, Janie did.

"Grapes of Wrath," Mr. Steinbeck's heart-breaking novel, is topping the best-sellers in that field here, while John Gunther's "Inside Asia" leads the nonfiction field.

Speaking of books, Carolyn Wells published her first mystery novel, "The Clue," on September 27, 1909. On the same date, this year, the same house, Lippincott's, will put out her seventy-fourth, "Crime Tears On."

THE LATEST thing in tall highball glasses has just popped up here. It comes in brilliant colors, and the decoration consists of reproductions of baggage labels from such famous hotels as Shepheard's in Cairo, and Excelsior Palace, on the Lido. They are very gay and snappy indeed, and will adorn any informal table.

New Recipes For Canning

FOR TEMPTING meals, delectable desserts at low cost, fill your shelves with home-canned vegetables and fruits.

You can turn out savory salads, stews and soups in a jiffy with jars of mixed vegetables on hand. One combination good for soups is two parts peeled cut tomatoes to one part each of corn, lima beans and peas with a little sliced onion for flavor, a level teaspoon of salt to each quart. Use no water but first cook tomatoes, then add other vegetables, boiling them for 3 minutes. Put in hot sterilized jars, seal and process in steam pressure cooker 80 minutes for quarts, 15 pounds pressure at 250 degrees F.

Don't lift jars from processer by the lids—you may break the seals. Nor should you place jars on a cold surface, but on a folded towel. Be sure jars don't touch each other and are free from drafts.

For something "extra special" put up at least few jars of perfect peaches in grenadine sirup. Scald, cold dip, peel, halve and pit peaches. Pack in hot sterilized jars. To each quart add one cup commercial grenadine sirup, and fill jar to within 1½ inches of top with medium sirup—1 cup sugar to 2 cups water. Seal and process 20 minutes in water bath or 35 minutes in heat-controlled oven at 275 degrees F.

Preserves, of course, you never want to be without—and one of the tastiest kinds is ginger pears! This recipe and dozens of others—for pickles, relishes and preserves—are given in our 40-page booklet, "New Ways of Canning Fruits, Vegetables and Meats." Has time tables, directions for processing by steam pressure cooker, hot-water bath, heat-controlled oven—in glass and tin.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "New Ways of Canning Fruits, Vegetables and Meats," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Tomato Sandwich

Tomatoes, sandwich fashion, are something new in salads. Cut thin slices of ripe tomatoes. Spread cottage cheese mixed with chopped onions, green peppers and a little mayonnaise on half of them. Arrange sandwich fashion with the rest of the slices. Chill, then cut into strips and serve six to a portion on crisp lettuce. Pass mayonnaise.

Roaches All Over the House?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep the floors and other places where you see roaches free from food particles and dampness. That's what attracts bugs. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it in all corners, back of and under the sink, refrigerator, stove, washstands, tubs, etc., and around openings where pipes go through the floor. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. When roaches scurry out, give them another dose of powder, Third, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder in the runways where roaches travel. Repeat these directions at regular intervals, and you'll soon be rid of roaches.

Bee Brand Insect Powder really kills roaches, ants and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the house. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. Sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 60¢.

NOTE: You can also kill roaches and ants, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

Suggestions for Cool Supper on Sunday

A cool set-up for a warm Sunday night supper—an abundant platterful of cold cuts from which each may make his own sandwich. Sheer slices of ham—oven-baked, so the flavors are all sealed in under a crusty coating of sugar studded with cloves. Wafer thin slivers of Swiss cheese. Lusty rounds of bologna sausage. Squares of American cheese. Tomato slices for the salad touch. Hard cooked eggs, and broiled strips of bacon.

To touch all this off and give just the right tang, fill a broken lettuce leaf in the center of the platter with a mound of old-fashioned fresh cucumber pickle slices. These crisp green pickles are perfectly spiced to set off all the other flavors on the platter and to accompany the sandwiches.

Green Summer Drinks

Since green is such a refreshing color, try tinting your rather colorless summer beverages a light green. Or use green-colored water for making the ice cubes.

Blending of Wheat Produces Various Kinds of Flour

Various types of flour are produced by blending the different varieties and kinds of wheats. The three kinds of wheat from which flours are made are durum, hard and soft wheats. Each flour is particularly well adapted to special uses.

General purpose, all-purpose or family flours are of such composition that they may be used satisfactorily for all household cookery purposes. In the hard wheat producing areas they are usually a blend of hard wheats, while in the soft wheat producing areas they are usually a blend of soft wheats.

Although all-purpose flours give good results in any type of product, the "Northern" variety, a blend of hard wheats, makes especially good yeast breads, while the "Southern" variety, a blend of soft wheats, makes especially good quick breads.

Two types of flour which are milled largely for commercial use are macaroni flours, which are milled from durum wheats, and bread flours, which are blends of hard spring and hard winter wheats.

Pastry flours are made of either hard or soft wheat and are finely milled, although not so fine as cake flour. They are used chiefly by bakers and are seldom available on the retail market.

Good cakes can be made with all purpose flours. However, cake flours, which are especially milled for the purpose, makes the finest and more delicate cakes.

Regal Summer Dessert

A regal summer frozen dessert is made by stuffing fresh peach halves with vanilla ice cream and then covering with cocoanut mixed with toasted shredded almonds.

Brown Bread Sandwich

Here's a sandwich idea: Mix broken or shredded nutmeats and some softened butter, moisten with strained or comb honey and spread on slices of brown bread.

Cabbage Is Good Served With Bacon Sauce

The time has come to talk of cabbages—with the fine new cabbage now on the market. Cabbage lends itself to a variety of uses—from crisp salads to tempting main dishes. Served either raw or cooked, this green leafy vegetable contributes valuable minerals and vitamins to the diet.

Cabbage should be cooked quickly and in just as little water as possible, so that it retains its fresh crispness and nice green color.

Cabbage With Bacon Sauce

Trim cabbage from a 2-pound cabbage head and chop coarsely. Wash quickly in cold water. Cover with just enough boiling water to prevent scorching, add 1 teaspoon salt and cook rapidly in an uncovered kettle until tender, 6 to 12 minutes. Drain cabbage. Cut ½ pound bacon in small pieces. Boil until delicately browned and crisp. Prepare a white sauce of 2 tablespoons bacon fat, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 1 cup liquid drained from the cabbage, and 1 cup milk. Add the cooked bacon. Combine with cabbage. Serve at once. Serves 6 to 8.

Hot Springs' Serenity Draws Many Of Diplomatic Group; Excitement Of Saratoga Fetches Other Notables

By Carolyn Bell

"NAMES MAKE NEWS"—or so we have been told. But big names around these parts, officials excluded, are pretty scarce. Having scattered to the four winds, uppercrust society is making news just about anywhere but in Washington.

Mrs. John R. "Ma" Williams, who still wields the social scepter with a firm hand, has transferred her entertaining from her home on New Hampshire avenue to Hot Springs, Va., for the nonce. She was hostess at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the Virginia Spa.

Senora de Espil, who is joined by her husband, the dapper Ambassador of the Argentine, every week-end, was among Mrs. William's guests. Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis were also there. The British journalist and his new wife would seem to be very much in demand from the number of times their names appear in guest lists. Still others at yesterday's party were Mr. and Mrs. John White Geary, William R. Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Loomis L. White, Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Mrs. William Maffitt, Miss Ellen Bates, Mrs. Charles McLure Clark, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. King Perin, Miss Ann Carley and Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Kent.

Hot Springs is a favorite with the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin. But, like so many other European diplomats, the Count has had to remain here on call, so to speak. However, he was able to tear away from the "situation" last week-end for a brief respite. Motoring to Charlottesville, Va., he spent the night there and then continued on to Hot Springs for the day.

Hot Springs and Saratoga Popular

Another diplomat who manages to dash up to Hot Springs now and then is the Military Attache of the Italian Embassy, Col. Vincenzo Coppola. With Signora Coppola, he is there now enjoying the mineral springs. Mrs. McKenney Mallon is at the resort, as are Miss Janet Fish and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Newbold.

Another spa definitely "on the map" at the moment, as far as the elite are concerned, is Saratoga. While Hot Springs is quiet, serene and healthful, Saratoga swings to the other extreme. The atmosphere is racy, exhilarating, and King Horse reigns supreme. The Ambassador to Belgium and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies have recently arrived at that chi chi little town in New York, to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps.

Arriving in Saratoga by plane yesterday for a fling at the bright lights and to try their luck with the ponies were Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean 2d, who have been in Bar Harbor, Me., with "Jock's" mother, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean. They will remain at the Gideon Putnam for several days. Former Ambassador and Mrs. Harry F. Guggenheim arrived there last night for the racing season.

Mrs. Larz Anderson, of this city, was recently hostess at a luncheon given at the Gideon Putnam for Maj. and Mrs. Van Ness Philip, J. Van Ness Phillip, jr., and Mrs. Charles F. DeLand, of Boston.

Cape Cod Colony Keeps Lively Pace

Meanwhile up on Cape Cod, the summer colony, which has a definite Washington accent, has been enjoying the gala Tercentenary celebration at the old town of Yarmouth. The setting is unbelievably lovely. The historic white church is perched high on the hill with pine trees nodding in the windows and the old Yankee Clipper with its sails unfurled is anchored in the blue waters of the harbor. It was in the midst of this picturesque scene that the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips enthralled a group of youngsters by spinning yarns of seafaring men.

Guido Perera, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, was chairman of the celebration and with his wife, the former Faith Phillips, and two sons, was on hand for the merrymaking. Bainbridge Crist, formerly of Washington, gathered a chorus hastily together and sang a splendid program of classical music.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger, of Georgetown, opened their house and gardens in Duxbury to the public. Mrs. Bittinger's hillside garden, filled with old-fashioned blooms, is particularly lovely. The Henry Stansburys, with their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, were among those from Washington attending the celebration.

Miss Laura Tuckerman, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Smith on the Cape, has recently left for South Hampton, Long Island, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman have opened "Dormie, their home there, for the first time in several years.

The Ed Gossetts Hosts at Dinner

Representative and Mrs. Ed Gossett, of Texas, entertained a small company at dinner last evening on the Terrace of the Shoreham in honor of William H. Wright, of Vernon, Tex., who is in Washington for a visit with Representative and Mrs. Gossett.

Included among the guests were Representative Eugene J. Keogh, Miss Margaret Bone and Miss Dean McGehee.

Albert W. Rinehart To Entertain at Dinner

Guests will include Miss Bette Bleser, Miss Frances Neff, Miss Marie Richey, Miss Jane Stratton, Herbert E. Garrett, Patrick Clyde and David M. Barrett.

Mrs. Wheat Is Hostess

Mrs. William H. Wheat, wife of Representative Wheat, of Rantoul, Ill., entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Colonial Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. Strikingly gowned in an all white ensemble, Mrs. Wheat received her guests in the cool recesses of the Wardman lounge.

The luncheon table was decorated with a floral centerpiece in shades of light pink blending into lavender. Those present were Mrs. William W. Arnold, Mrs. A. R. Bailey, Mrs. Harry Baker, Miss Miss Gertrude Davis, Mrs. James E. Duke, Mrs. S. Fay Harper, Mrs. Charles E. Hungerford, Mrs. Chester King, Mrs. William M. Lannagan, Mrs. Robert McKinley and Mrs. Thomas Smith. The guests played bridge during the rest of the afternoon.

Leaves for Visit

Mrs. J. H. Michaelis, of the Shoreham Hotel, has left Washington for Wheeling, W. Va., where she is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schlesinger.

Resort Expects The Hugheses

Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who stopped at the Skytop Club in Pennsylvania earlier this season, are expected to return there this month for an extended stay.

E. A. Varela, of the Carnegie Institution, and his daughter, Miss Helen Varela, and his son, A. A. Varela, recently arrived at the Skytop Club to spend a week. This week-end they will be joined by Mr. Varela's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bryan.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Doherty, of Washington, are expected at Skytop this week-end for the Lackawanna Kennel Club's "dog show in the clouds," which will be held tomorrow on the Skytop Club grounds.

Mrs. Whittington Back From Hospital

Mrs. William V. Whittington, who has been in the Polyclinic Hospital in Harrisonburg, Pa., since June 14, has returned to her residence here at 4700 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Whittington, who is known professionally as M. Vashti Burr, president of the Women's Professional Panhellenic Association, was at her office in Harrisonburg when she was stricken with appendicitis. She is a past president of Phi Delta Delta international legal fraternity.

G. O. P. Group To Honor Widow Of President

Picnic at Oyster Bay To Mark Birthday of Mrs. Edith Roosevelt

Tomorrow evening at Roosevelt Memorial Park in Oyster Bay, the seventy-eighth birthday of Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt, widow of former President Theodore Roosevelt, will be celebrated by a picnic supper arranged by the Edith Kermit Roosevelt Women's Republican Club. The entertainment, which is being given on the day before Mrs. Roosevelt's birthday, will take place in the American Legion Clubhouse in case of rain.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who will return especially for the celebration, has been making her annual visit to her ancestral home in Brooklyn, Conn. Mrs. Richard Derby, the former Ethel Roosevelt, is president of the Republican Club named for her mother.

Mrs. Roosevelt, a descendant of early Connecticut pioneers, among them Col. Daniel Tyler, a Revolutionary officer, was born on August 6, 1861, in Norwich, Conn. Her only sister, Miss Emily Carow, died last March in Porto Maurizio, Italy.

High points of the celebration will be a big birthday cake and a campfire, with singing led by George Velsor. Among those present will be Representative Leonard Hall, of Oyster Bay, members of the Men's Republican Club, the Clara Lee Womans' Republican Club, the Roosevelt Club and the Oyster Bay Republican Recruits. Mrs. Eben Howell has been in charge of the arrangements for the affair.

Lieut. Armstrong And Wife to Visit The John K. Herrs

Lieut. and Mrs. De Vere P. Armstrong, of West Point, will arrive in Washington tomorrow for a day's visit with Mrs. Armstrong's uncle and aunt, Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, chief of cavalry, and Mrs. Herr, and will be guests that evening of Miss Fannie Herr, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Herr, at a small informal dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club.

They will return that evening to Fort Hoyle, Md., where they have been guests for several days of Mrs. Armstrong's father and mother, Col. and Mrs. Rene de Russy Hoyle. Col. Hoyle is now commanding officer of that post which was named in honor of his father. Mrs. Herr is the sister of Col. Hoyle. On Sunday Lieut. Armstrong will return to his post at West Point, but Mrs. Armstrong will remain a week or so longer at Fort Hoyle with their two sons, Peter and Alan Armstrong.

Rep. Randolph Has Theater Party

Representative Randolph, of West Virginia, entertained at a luncheon party yesterday afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel in honor of members of the West Virginia Tomato Festival committee who were in Washington to confer with Miss Izetta Jewel, queen of the festival.

Last evening Representative Randolph entertained his guests at a theater party at the Cross Roads Theater at Baileys Cross Roads in Virginia where Miss Jewel is playing the lead in "The Curtain Rises." Following the performance the visitors from West Virginia were entertained at a supper party on the roof of the Washington Hotel.

Guests at luncheon yesterday included Jack Hunter, director of the festival; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Weber, Gene Miller, Paul Yost, chairman of the social committee of the festival; Hudson Yost, Miss Jewel, Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller and Miss Mary Davis.

Among others entertaining at theater parties at the Cross Roads last night were Miss Meredith Howard and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. S. M. Corbett with their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. William H. Corbett.

Rowena Chandler Emert To Be Wed August 19

Miss Rowena Chandler Emert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgar Emery, of Seiverville, Tenn., has selected August 19 for her wedding to Albert Schmutzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schutzer, of this city.

The marriage will take place in Washington.

The Culbertsons Back From Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson returned to the United States on Monday on the S. S. Normandie from an extended tour of Europe, during which they visited Denmark, Sweden, Germany, France and England. They left Washington about the middle of June.

Mrs. Culbertson went directly from New York to their summer home, Charmian Manor, at Charmian, Pa., where she will remain the rest of the summer with her three daughters, Miss Junia Culbertson, who will continue her singing career in the fall; Miss Jane Culbertson, who has just returned from a six-month trip around the world, and Miss Josephine Culbertson.

Mr. Culbertson has returned to his law offices here in town. He will leave in a few days for Ann Arbor, Mich., where he will take part in the conference of economic relations with Latin America on August 11 and 12, and then will return directly to Washington.

Miss Bondaroff To Become Bride

The marriage of Miss Bertha Ethel Bondaroff and Samuel W. Fishkin, of New York City and Washington, will take place on Sunday afternoon at the home of the Rev. Zemach Green.

The bride, who is the daughter of Nathan Bondaroff of Washington, will be attended by her sister, Miss Elsie Bondaroff.

Mr. Fishkin, a graduate of the University of Maryland, is head of the science department of Maryland Park High School, Seat Pleasant, Md., where he has taught for the last nine years.

Miss Saks is a senior at Holyoke College. Col. and Mrs. Heller entertained a few young people in her honor at the Army-Navy Country Club dinner dance last evening.

The Nicholsons On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Frank Nicholson, whose marriage took place this season, are now guests of the latter's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton B. Rout at Del Mar, Calif.

A recent event that the young couple attended there was the opening of the Del Mar Turf Club at Bing Crosby's Southern California race track.

Mrs. Nicholson was the former Miss Audrey Rout. She and her husband will leave Del Mar tomorrow on their way to Banff Springs and Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies. They are expected to return to their home in Chevy Chase the first of next month.

Shawn—Sieber Wedding Tomorrow

The marriage of Miss Aubrey Sieber, daughter of Mrs. Fred J. Sieber, to Fred Shawn will take place at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in St. John's Church in Georgetown.

The prospective bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, T. R. Imlay.

Mrs. Charles Draper, aunt of the bride, will serve as matron of honor. The maid of honor will be Miss Paulette Banner. Bridesmaids will be Miss Norma Talbott, of Ithaca, N. Y., and Miss Katherine Daniel, of Arlington, Va.

Fred Sieber, brother of the bride-elect, will serve as best man. Ushers will be Carlton Smith, John Sessions, Herbert Osborne, and Gordon Zimmerman.

Following the ceremony a reception will be given at the Carlton Hotel for members of the wedding party and the immediate family.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Karl J. Hardy announce the birth of a daughter, Jeremy Hardy, August 2, at Columbia Hospital. Mrs. Hardy is the former Miss Zella Smoot, daughter of former Senator Reed Smoot and the late Mrs. Smoot. The child's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Karl D. Hardy, of Salt Lake City. Mr. Smoot is a practicing attorney in Washington.

Miss Birnie Becomes Bride Of J. M. Capron

Couple to Make Home In Massachusetts; General at Wedding

Of wide interest in Washington was the marriage yesterday afternoon in Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass., of Miss Margaret Schenck Birnie, daughter of Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, jr., and Mrs. Birnie, to John Martin Capron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Capron, of West Newbury, Mass. The ceremony took place at 4:30 in the afternoon, and was followed by a reception at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge.

The bride had as her maid of honor and only attendant Miss Mary J. Brady, the sister of her brother-in-law, Francis T. Brady, Mr. and Mrs. Brady (the former Sue Birnie) now make their home in Portsmouth, R. I., where Mr. Brady is professor of mathematics and science at the Priory School.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady made their home in Washington for several years, where Mr. Brady was assistant professsor of physics at Georgetown University.

Miss Birnie was graduated from Western High School here and from Radcliffe College. For the last few years she has made her home in Cambridge and has been studying at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Mr. Capron was graduated from Harvard University and Harvard Law School and is practicing law in Boston. The couple will make their home in Cambridge.

Gen. and Mrs. Birnie left Washington last week for Cambridge to be present at the wedding and have been staying at 11 Gray street, where the bride has had an apartment for the past three years. Gen. and Mrs. Birnie, who have made their home here since Gen. Birnie's retirement as Chief of Field Artillery of the Army, just recently returned from a month's trip to the West Coast, during which they went from Washington to New Orleans by boat, crossed to the West Coast by train, visited Berkeley, Calif.; Seattle, Wash., and Vancouver, British Columbia, and returned through Canada.

Paul O'Leary And Wife Leave For Ithaca, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Leary left today for their home in Ithaca, N. Y., after a six-month stay in Washington, where Mr. O'Leary, an instructor at Cornell University, was placed on special work at the Department of Commerce. Mrs. O'Leary is a niece of Isaac Gans, who entertained for them extensively while they were here.

Mrs. O'Leary is the former Harriet Barton, daughter of the late Col. Frank A. Barton. Col. Barton was the brother of the late Mrs. Isaac Gans and had many friends here.

Van Arsdales Plan New England Trip

The Assistant Commissioner of the Patent Office and Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale will leave tomorrow for New Rochell, N. Y., where they will visit her father, Clarence S. Betts, and will remain a week.

They will spend two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Burgoyne, of Bridge Hampton, Long Island, then will motor through New England and will return to Washington after Labor Day.

Warren Piersons Leave for New York

Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, and Mrs. Pierson will close their apartment and leave today for New York.

After a stay of several days at the Hotel St. Regis, they will sail on August 9 on the S. S. Manhattan for six weeks of European travel.

Basil—Chotas Plans

Mrs. Eli Nicholas Chotas has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Sophia, and Frank E. Basil on Thursday, August 17, at Saint Sophia Church. The wedding will take place at 11 a. m.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unable to Finance Divorce, Woman Considers Bigamous Union; Would Trouble Follow?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband left me over ten years ago and I wish to marry again, but having to support three children on a very small income, I find myself unable to finance a divorce. Do you think it advisable for me to marry anyway? Could my first husband cause any trouble, by bringing a charge of bigamy? My husband-to-be knows of my undivorced status and has offered to pay for a divorce, but I do not wish to obligate myself to him in this way.

One other thing troubles me: My future husband wishes to live in a rather desolate place, far from all modern conveniences, such as gas, electricity, running water and even churches and adequate shopping centers. Do you think we could possibly remain happy with nothing to do but sit looking at each other every evening for the rest of our lives?

I am a small town woman, but have been used to a moderate amount of city conveniences as named above. I like a quiet life, but I must admit he is planning just a little too much quietude for me and I am afraid I might find myself wishing I had never entered into it, regardless of my great love for the man. I will appreciate your honest opinions and advice about the whole thing, as I find myself in a quandary.

MRS. N.

Preposterous Notion

DEAR MRS. N.: Bigamy is a serious offense against the laws of the land, and you would be surely asking for trouble in entering into a bigamous union. Your first husband might cause trouble or he might not. But the material for making trouble would always be there, ready for anybody to use who wanted to use it against you—even including your second husband, who just might use the knowledge as a weapon with which to bulldoze you later.

If you haven't the good judgment to keep your neck out of the noose for your own sake, then you might have the decency to play the part of law-abiding citizen for your children's sake. It wouldn't help them any, in later years, to have to live down the generally known fact—or even the secret personal knowledge—that their mother had been a bigamist, which is to say, a criminal of sorts. And remember those old sayings: "Truth will out." And, "Foul deeds will rise, though all the world o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes."

There is something basically wrong with this whole set-up. If the man's good will toward you isn't sufficiently to be trusted that you could accept his present financial assistance in obtaining a divorce, then it is even less to be trusted in the precarious arrangement of a bigamous union. Why do you hesitate to accept his help, while yet being willing to enter into an illegal domestic arrangement with him?

If the man had plain common sense—and truly loved you—he would refuse absolutely to marry you until he could claim you legally. He would do it as much for your protection as for his own. And that is what your attitude toward the situation, and toward him, should be. The fact that neither of you appears to be looking any further ahead than the ends of your respective noses, causes me to wonder if you, as a pair, are mentally qualified for marriage, even supposing you were free to marry.

The future prospect grows even bleaker, in my opinion, when we take into consideration your strong objection to living in hermit isolation for the remainder of life. The fact that you shrink from the very thought of an existence devoid of gas, electricity, running water, churches, adequate shopping centers and handy contact with neighbors and friends affords indisputable evidence that you lack the pioneering spirit. Love of the man would not pull you cheerfully through such an experience. You would need to love such solitude for its own sake, enough to hazard the penalties involved, before you could risk it.

And what of the children's education and future opportunities in such an environment? After all, they need contact with church and human society. The companionship of a down-in-the mouth mother and step-father would not be enough. And are you even sure that he would make a good step-father for the children? You should think of that before giving up your present source of income to become dependent wholly upon his bounty.

I have listened to a great many ill-advised marriage plans in the course of my experience as a problem columnist, but this is one of the craziest yet. It is my frank opinion that you would be leaping straight from the frying pan into the fire in forming a matrimonial alliance with this man. The best advise I can give you is to see the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L street northwest, National 8874, about a divorce. A Community Chest agency, it supplies free legal counsel and representation to persons unable to pay for such service.

How to Select Long-Wear Rugs, Care for Them

Because a new rug represents such a large expenditure and should last many years, it is well worth selecting carefully and handling wisely.

Machine-made rugs, such as chenilles, Wiltons, Axminsters, velvets, Brussels and tapestries, are produced in various grades, with good ones in all. Quality of wool, closeness of weave, density of pile and excellence of dyes all play a part in producing finished quality.

Oriental rugs are made by hand and the tufts are knotted as well as woven. Their sheen is due partly to the method of tying the knots and partly to aniline dyes and acid finishes. If your new rug is sold to you as washed, it has had this chemical treatment and you must make up your mind to sacrifice some quality for appearance.

In general, in buying any rug, watch for density of pile because this serves to give added wear. Especially if you are selecting a rug that will have heavy traffic, pick one with known durability. Cheaper construction will serve in such space as bedrooms, where there is little walking.

Picks Up for That Black Dress

One of the sure-fire methods of rejuvenating that old black dress is the use of spanking new buttons. Here are some novel ones which smart young women on a budget will want to pounce upon at once. All the characteristics of fine old silversmiths went into the carving of these silver metal buttons whose square-cut patterns echo an authentic old English woodland motif. The silver medallion pin worn in the hand-crotcheted head scarf is in identical pattern, the whole of which goes to the aid of last year's difficult between season's black frocks. The turban head scarf provides a touch of color to the costume and also keeps the hair neatly in place.

Basket Dessert

For a summer luncheon, little basket desserts are effective. One way is to fashion baskets from oranges and fill them with jellied fruit, or sliced fruits and marshmallows or frozen foods. Another idea is to make cherry or rhubarb pies in muffin pans and arrange pastry strips, criss-cross fashion (like a basket) across the top. When baked you can insert little handles of raffia twined wires.

The Deserted Village

"What on earth are YOU doing town?"

"We—ll, er—we just haven't been able to get away yet. What are you doing here?"

"Oh, well, we—what I mean is—we're not going away until later."

"We never were here so late before. Did you ever see such a desert island in your life?"

"Never! Positively nobody's here! I was just telling Leila Tinfoil——"

"Don't tell me the Tinfoils are still in town!"

"Yes. Otis has been too busy to get away—at least, that's what she said—and she didn't want to leave him."

"Of all things! Well, I just ran onto Marcia Burlap awhile ago." Haven't THEY left?"

"No. They're staying in town this summer. She couldn't get a decent cottage down at Bandana Beach—at least that's what she said—and then one of the boys had to have some private tutoring."

"You know, I heard Horace hadn't been doing so well."

"That's probably it. I'd think she'd just die here, though, with everything so dead.

"Well, she was going to the Van Looney party tonight."

"Don't tell me the Van Looneys are still here!"

"Oh, yes; they had so many people wanting to visit them on the way to the World's Fair—at least, that's what Estelle said—that they just decided to stay in town this summer."

"That's a fine tale! It's about as bad as the one Marie Luker was telling."

"Don't tell me she's in town!"

"Absolutely. She said she couldn't get anybody she could trust to take care of the goldfish."

"Why she'll simply die here!"

"I know. She said she knew already just how Admiral Byrd felt at the South Pole."

"She must miss the Pelts a lot. They were all of them together so much."

"Oh, the Pelts are here."

"No!"

"Yes! I met Marjorie yesterday. She said they just decided it would be so much trouble to open up the summer place and then besides with Mitzi in the hospital——"

"Mitzi?"

"Yes, you know little Mitzi—the Pekingese."

"Well, I don't know how on earth Marjorie'll stand it here . . . no parties or anything."

"The Pence Bigsbees! Are THEY here?"

"Yes, they couldn't get reservations when they wanted them on the North Cape Cruise and as they'd been everywhere else, they just decided to stay in town. At least, that's what she said."

"I'd have thought they'd have gone to Canada with the Mortimer Silos."

"Who said the Mortimer Silos were in Canada?"

"It was in the paper."

"Well, they're in town just the same—living in the back of the house. At least, that's what everyone says. Why, they even boarded up the front windows."

"Can you beat that! Well, I have to run along. I'm meeting Hortense Clipper for lunch."

"Is Hortense in town?"

"Yes, she didn't want to get away from her doctor."

"Well, now, if I don't see you again before you go——"

"Oh, well, really I may not go at all. You see—well, what I mean is—it's such a nuisance to pack and everything, and I haven't been very strong——"

"I know. That's one reason we're seriously thinking of staying at home. Then another thing, when you go anywhere, you have to mix up with so many common tourists."

"I know. I simply can't stand to get on a boat for that reason."

"And then the service at the hotels is so bad, and I don't like to live out of a suitcase."

"Me, either."

"And besides it's getting so late and so—well, we've just about decided to stick it out."

"I think we probably will, too."

"Well, if you do, give me a ring and we'll get together. You know this place is going to be so utterly dead——"

"I know. Completely deserted. We'll just have to join up and play Robinson Crusoes."

Hints for Making Cooling Drinks

To give a subtle flavor to summer beverages, rub the insides of the glasses with crushed mint before filling them. Or soak several mint leaves in the juices stored in the refrigerator. Remove them just before serving.

Fresh mint leaves as a garnish give little flavor but they do offer a refreshing dressiness to each glass. If you have no fresh mint on hand, dissolve 10 mint candies in a quart of juice and stir well to distribute the flavor.

Girls Are Advised To Study Character Of Their Suitors

By the Associated Press

Columbia, Mo.—Though Snow White, rescued by Prince Charming, lived happily ever after, the modern young college girl cannot expect such a romantic courtship and marriage, says Dr. Henry Bowman, of Stephens College.

But, he tells seniors at the 108-year-old junior college for women, a girl can educate herself for a happy marriage—and pretty girls flock to his classes.

Dr. Bowman says he goes on from where "the cinema leaves off"—at the altar—and shows that marriage presents such concrete problems as earning wages, leisure for the wife, children, adjustments of husband and wife to each other and scores of other problems "young ladies frequently overlook."

"I think the pendulum is swinging from careers for women back to marriage," he says. "I find girls from 18 to 20 want to know what kind of a man to marry and I tell them that there are three kinds for every woman: the man she wants; the man she needs and the man she is apt to get.

"After this I advise them to take an inventory of themselves before they begin seriously to select a mate. A girl then often revamps her ideas and realizes the man she wants and is engaged to is not the man she needs."

To learn a man's character quickly and thoroughly, Dr. Bowman advises his students to meet him in numerous situations. Courtship, he says, should be long enough so that a "woman knows her man" but the engagement should be comparatively short.

Krakauskas Pounded But Nats Win 4th in Row, 9-5

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 1939 21

Riggs, Wood Gain Semifinals at Southampton

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A tall, handsome ad slightly knock-kneed fellow pitched 20 minutes of batting practice for the Nats yesterday and it was a rare sight because Wesley Cheek Ferrell was pitching merely for the fun of it. It has been a long time, nigh onto 18 years, that Ferrell exerted himself only for fun, and that's why he doesn't care if he ever signs another baseball contract.

POVICH

"The 13 years I spent in the big leagues were nice ones," Ferrell said. "I don't ever have to worry about a job again. If I did, I'd have only myself to blame. I was a high-priced pitcher during those 13 years and I'm not ashamed to say I socked it away."

He's in Washington this week, escorting his parents on a visit to Brother Rick before moving on to the New York World Fair. The Ferrells are traveling in style behind the long-nosed 1939 model automobile that Wesley bought for the folks with money that wasn't even bank-interest percentage of his baseball earnings.

Always Got Good Money

Ferrell was indeed a high-priced pitcher during his big league career. He always had an exalted opinion of his own worth and he didn't spend the customary big league apprenticeship at the comparatively modest salary of most rookies. He was paid big league money almost from the outset because in his first season in the majors he had the good fortune to win 20 games for the Cleveland Indians.

During most of the years he was with Cleveland Ferrell was the highest salaried player on the club and when he went to Boston in 1934 he did not sign for peanuts. He signed, in fact, for the salary he was demanding from the Indians who traded him rather than pay him the money he sought.

He wasn't the highest-paid player on the Red Sox for the reason that he couldn't outshine such satellites as Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx, but when he was later traded to the Nats he reigned for two years as the costliest performer on the Washington club.

Fired Into World Series

He's played in some luck, too, during his time. One of the reasons he was fired by the Nats was because of his high salary, but he wasn't out of a job longer than 48 hours. And when he did connect it was with no second-division club. It was with none other than the Yankees, whom he joined just in time to figure in a $3,000 share of the World Series spoils of 1938.

Wesley's still a little bit bewildered about his release by the Yankees six weeks ago, especially as since that time the Yanks claimed Jimmy DeShong, who hasn't pitched a single ball for Joe McCarthy.

"It's hard to forgive Joe McCarthy for giving me my release," Ferrell was saying. "I don't know what he expected of me. Down South he only let me pitch 13 innings during the entire training trip, and of course I was wild when the season started. He should know a pitcher needs more work than that.

"But the Yankee situation is peculiar, or I'd probably still be with them. They had to cut down, but they couldn't let any of their young fellows go. They had to keep fellows like Buddy Rosar, or they'd lose him, and because of the new rule they couldn't put Spurgeon Chandler on the retired list, despite his broken leg. So I'm the fall guy.

No Minors for Ferrell

"I'm not crying about it, though. I'm having a lot of fun resting. My golf game is in the seventies, and it's been the first time I've had any leisure in the summer. I've just discovered the summer months, in fact. My arm's feeling better and the long rest ought to be a great help. Maybe next spring I'll sign up with some club and keep on pitching. But it will have to be a good big-league team. You won't find Wes Ferrell pitching back in the minors. He doesn't have to."

Between them, the two Ferrell boys—Wes and Rick—have done very well indeed in big league baseball. Brother Rick has not been the high-salaried star that Wes was, but he has been better paid than the average big leaguer, and he got a tremendous start toward a bank roll when he first signed a major league contract. Judge Landis declared him a free agent because of irregularities in contracts he had signed, and Rick obtained a bonus of $25,000 for selling his services to the Browns.

In the big leagues, Rick has been the antithesis of Brother Wes. He has been a steady, reliable, tight-lipped performer, in striking contrast to the temperamental outbursts of the pitching member of the family. Wes has created storm scenes on every club he worked for, with the exception of the Yankees; tearing gloves to shreds, walking out of the box uninvited and bickering with umpires and managers. He hasn't neglected self-discipline, either, being given to beating his head against the wall when he didn't like his own pitching.

But for all his displays of short temper, the fellows who have played with him never could accuse him of alibiing at their expense. He was not the pitcher to stand with his hands on his hips and glare balefully at a man who muffed a ball behind him. When he went into his tantrums he was angry only at Wes Ferrell. You can't criticize a guy too much for that sort of anger.

Joe Hunt Defeated 4–6, 6–3 and 7–5; Prusoff, Winner Over Grant, Withdraws

By the Associated Press

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Bobby Riggs led the way into the semifinals of both singles and doubles in the Meadow Club's annual invitation tennis tournament today, but the unpredictable Chicagoan had to fight all the way before overcoming Joe Hunt in the individual competition.

With Riggs into the round-of-four of the singles marched Sidney Wood, the former Wimbledon champion; Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, and Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex. It will be Riggs against Kamrath and Wood facing Sutter in tomorrow's semifinals.

A hot sun and a long lay-off from tournament tennis deprived Hunt of most of his early strength in his match against Riggs, but he staged a rally in the third set that forced the No. 1 Davis Cup hopeful to go all out to win, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5.

Hunt Lacks Stamina

Hunt, playing his first competitive tennis of the summer, was spent at the end of the second set. When Riggs blasted out a 4-to-0 advantage in the final stanza, the Naval Academy plebe's defeat seemed imminent. At this stage, however, he rallied and finally squared the set at 5 to 5.

Riggs' service followed and Hunt took a 40-to-0 edge, but his weariness overtook him again, his strokes overshot the baseline five successive times, and Riggs took the important 6-to-5 lead.

Hunt served, and was one point from a 6-6 deadlock, but Riggs, forcing the issue now, applied too much pressure and registered in the final game, winning on a flat drive that nicked the net cord and bounded crazily out of Hunt's reach.

Advances by Default

Kamrath advanced by default over Henry Prusoff, of Seattle. Prusoff, who upset Bitsy Grant on opening day, was forced to withdraw because of torn stomarch muscles.

Wood defeated George Toley, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—2, while Sutter toppled Bob Peacock, of Berkeley, Calif., 5—7, 6—2, 6—2.

In the doubles quarter-finals, Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, defeated Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, 12—10, 6—4, while Frankie Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, bested John Hope Doeg, of Rumson, N. J., and Charles Mattmann, of New York, 6—3, 6—4.

Riggs and Elwood T. Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., disposed of Ronald Lubin and George Toley, Los Angeles, 7—5, 6—4.

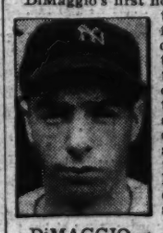
DiMaggio Hits Two As Yanks Win, 12-3

Champions Rout Buck Newsom, Two Other Detroit Pitchers With 16-Hit Attack; Pearson Wins Tenth Victory of Season

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 3.—The world champion Yankees, who just won't stay down long, cuffed the Detroit Tigers, 12 to 3, today with a 16-hit bombardment which included four home runs, two of them by Joe DiMaggio.

The Bronx Bombers, retaliating for embarrassing defeats in the first two games of their series, stormed over three Detroit pitchers and finished Buck Newsom, the Tigers' starter, with a six-run blast in the fifth.



DiMAGGIO

DiMaggio's first homer came with two on in the first, and the other concluded the Yankee attack in the eighth. In addition, Bill Dickey hit his seventeenth of the season in the third and Red Rolfe hit for the circuit in the sixth.

New York's first big inning in weeks started with a walk to Rolfe in the fifth. He went to third on a single and scored on DiMaggio's forceout. Dickey walked and George Selkirk doubled DiMaggio home. Luther Thomas then took charge and purposely passed Joe Gordon, to fill the bases. Babe Dahlgren tripled and scored on Monte Pearson's sacrifice fly.

Pearson allowed 11 hits in winning his tenth game of the year, but put together seven empty innings between the Detroit scoring. The Tigers opened threateningly with a run in the first, as Benny McCoy walked, stole second and scored on Earl Averill's single. But it wasn't until the ninth that they got their other two runs on a pair of singles, an error and a sacrifice fly.

Bob Bensinger In Semifinals Of Culver Net

By the Associated Press.

Culver, Ind., Aug. 3.—Little Bobby Bensinger, the District of Columbia's only entry in the boys' division of the National Tennis Tournament, remained in the running for both singles and doubles titles here today with impressive quarter-final round victories.

In the singles the fourth-seeded Bensinger, D. C. and Middle Atlantic Boys' champion, defeated fifth-ranked Ted Myers, San Francisco, 6—3, 6—4, and in doubles he and Glenn Gardner, New Orleans, La., eliminated Arthur Leighton, Chicago, and Robert Lovell, Hubbell, Mich., 2—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Joining Bensinger in the semifinals were Budge Patty, No. 1, from Los Angeles, Blair Hawley, No. 3, New York City, and Harry Likas, No. 4, San Francisco. Patty and Hawley and Likas and Bensinger meet today.

To survive today's semifinal doubles match, Bensinger and Gardner must upset the top-seeded combination of Patty and Likas. The other semifinal brings together Hawley and Myers, No. 2, and Tom and Bob Falkneburg, No. 4.

Earl Bartlett, New Orleans, and Glen Hewitt, Houston, Tex., seeded fifth, dropped out of the junior doubles by default when Bartlett was unable to play because of a shoulder strained yesterday.

In quarter-final junior singles matches Ted Schroeder, Glendale, Calif., upset Robert Carrothers, Coronado, Calif., 6—4, 6—0; Larry Dee, San Francisco, beat Arthur Marx, Beverly Hills, Calif., 6—2, 6—2, and Ted Olewine, Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Gardner Larned, Chicago, 6—0, 6—1.

Middle Atlantic Entry Deadline Extended

The dead-line entry for the Middle Atlantic tennis championships starting Saturday at Edgemoor Club has been extended from 6 p. m. yesterday until 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the draw will be made, Referee Strand Johnsen announced last night.

Cubs Defeat Phils in Wild Game, 9 to 6

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Chicago's Cubs defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 9 to 6 today, but that wasn't the half of it. Both starting pitchers were chased, Cub rookies had a field day, Morrie Arnovich, the National League's leading hitter, was benched; Coach Hans Lobert of the Phils, was banished, and Doc Prothro, Philly manager, walked off the field in "disgust."

ARNOVICH

The Cubs were outhit 15 to 13, but a big fourth inning, including homers by Stan Hack and Hank Leiber, helped Bill Lee to his twelfth triumph, although he had to be rescued by Jack Russell.

Rookie Bobby Mattick, making his debut as successor to Shortstop Dick Bartell, had a perfect day with two hits. Bill Nicholson, another

Catcher Injured Badly by Ball Dropped 800 Feet

Treasure Island, San Francisco, Aug. 3 (INS).—A baseball dropped from a height of 800 feet struck Joe Sprinz, catcher of the San Francisco Seals, in the mouth today as he attempted to catch it. He was seriously injured.

Sprinz managed to get his catcher's glove on the ball, but it was traveling with such terrific force that it glanced off the glove and struck him in the mouth, fracturing his jaw and severely lacerating his lips.

Sprinz had hoped to set a new record in catching a baseball dropped from a blimp at a height of 800 feet. The present record is 758 feet.

Ralph Fowler, Harrell Score Record 28

Nine-Hole Best Ball Mark Set on Virginia Course; Lose 1st Nine

Ralph Fowler, golf committee chairman at Washington Golf and Country Club, and R. T. (Lefty) Harrell, who promoted the District of Columbia-Virginia pro match last year, compiled what is believed to be a record nine-hole best ball score yesterday over the Virginia layout.

Playing as partners against Club Pro Dave Thomson and L. H. Whitten, the Fowler-Harrell team rattled off a best ball score of 28 for the back nine, seven under par, with eight threes and a birdie 4 on the fifteenth hole.

After losing the first nine, 2 and 1, Fowler and Harrell doubled the best on the back nine and thus came out ahead for the day. Five of the birdies went to the accurate second shots of Harrell, while Fowler filled in with the other two.

Harrell dropped a birdie on the tenth, and then Fowler missed a 4-footer for a birdie on the eleventh. Fowler birdied the twelfth, Harrell the thirteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth, with an assortment of great approach shots, and then Fowler placed his second shot a foot from the cup on the long par 4 eighteenth for a birdie 3 and eight threes between them in nine holes.

Conn and Bettina In Return Bout

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3 (AP).—Mike Jacobs, New York fight promoter, announced today he had signed Light-Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh, and Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., for a return bout next September 25 at Pittsburgh.

Conn won the title from Bettina last July 13 in New York

Misplays Help Nats Win Fourth Straight

Krakauskas Pounded, Relieved by Appleton; Case Has Field Day With Single, Double, Triple and Three Stolen Bases Off Glenn

By Shirley Povich.

Joe Krakauskas registered his sixth victory in his last seven starts for the Nats when he beat the Browns yesterday, 9 to 5, but the chances are he will carefully omit mention of that one when he relates to his grandchildren the pitching feats of their pappy's pappy.

Because Krakauskas' pitching yesterday was brilliant only in comparison to the Brown's whose five hurlers performed like fugitives from the sandlots and chucked runs at the Nats faster than Krakky could throw 'em back at the Browns.

The bow-legged left hander surrendered 13 hits to the Browns and was in trouble continually. Toward the finish he was wilting so rapidly that Manager Bucky Harris called on Pete Appleton to finish the game. The Browns outhit the Nats 13 to 10, but there was the little matter of eight bases on balls and a pair of St. Louis errors that helped to offset the Browns clouting.

The chief reason Washington won its fourth straight ball game was Howard Mills, the pretzel-like left hander who was party to seven Washington runs before Manager Fred Haney jerked him off the premises in the fourth inning. Mills walked five batters in his short term including the three passes he yielded in the first inning when all

King Leopold Wins, Then Loses In Amateur Golf

Le Zoute, Belgium, Aug. 3 (AP).—After beating a local hotel keeper on the nineteenth hole in the first round, King Leopold was eliminated today in the Belgium amateur golf championship at the same hole by P. J. Clive, son of the British ambassador.

LEOPOLD

The King, the first reigning monarch to compete in the championship, ran into bad luck. At the eighteenth his drive rolled near a gate and he had a bad lie on the nineteenth, where his drive stuck in the soggy turf.

Rideout Wins Again

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 3 (AP).—Wayne Rideout, one of the racing twins from Texas State Teachers, won the mile feature event of the Connecticut State Police Association field day here today in 4:18.

Former Champ Wins

New York, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Former Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri, of Marlboro, N. Y., scored an eight-round decision over Joe Dejesus, of Puerto Rico, in the feature fight at the Fort Hamilton arena tonight. Canzoneri weighed 141; Dejesus, 137.

Rain Postpones Lucky Teter Show

The final local appearance of the season for Lucky Teter and his internationally known troupe of daredevils which was scheduled last night was postponed by rain until Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Officials of the show which played to more than 2,500,000 Americans last year waited until the last moment but were forced to postpone activities because the dirt track would have been a suicide route for even such skilled drivers as Teter's.

Wimbledon Champ Loses First Set of Year To Pauline Beetz

By the Associated Press

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 3—The seeded quartet in the annual Maidstone Club invitation tournament advanced into the semi-final round today, led by Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who occasioned the only excitement by dropping her first set of the year.

The honor of capturing a stanza from the American and Wimbledon champion went to Pauline Betz, rising young Los Angeles player, who eventually lost, 3—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Miss Marble's opponent in the upper bracket encounter tomorrow will be fourth-seeded Dorothy Workman of Los Angeles, who won a straight set victory from Virginia Wolfenden of San Francisco, 6—3, 6—4.

The lower bracket semi-final perches were taken by Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., seeded No. 2, and Helen Jacobs, No. 3. Mrs. Fabyan was extended by Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., 2—6, 6—4, 6—4, while Miss Jacobs topped Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, 6—2, 6—2.

ALICE MARBLE

Seeded Quartet Gains With East in Maidslone Tennis Tournament

Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan attained the doubles round of four, at the expense of Barbara Bradley, of Los Angeles, and Millicent Hirsh, of New York, 6—2, 6—2. Mme. Sylvia Henrotin and Dorothy Andrus, of New York, joined them in the upper bracket with a 4—6, 6—4, 6—2 triumph over Marta Barnett, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex.

Miss Bundy and Miss Workman reached the lower half along with Mme. Mathieu and Miss Jacobs. The former pair downed Anne Page, of Philadelphia, and Florence Leboutillier, of Westbury, N. Y., 6—0, 6—3, and Mme. Mathieu and Miss Jacobs scored over Patricia Canning, of Alameda, Calif., and Miss Wolfenden, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

Redlin, With Meade Up, Beats Stake Eligibles at Saratoga

Victor Sets New Record In Feature

Red Eye, Despondent, Kindergarten and Wise Lady in Field; Collects $2,725 Purse

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Four candidates for the $10,000, mile and a quarter Alabama stakes, to be divided August 14, were among the starters in the seven furlong test stakes here this afternoon, but none of them could match the sprinting ability of W. H. Lipscomb's Redlin, a non-eligible. Don Meade showed the Caratogians in the crowd a good example of how he managed to win 30 races at Empire City when he kept the winner going long enough to score by a head over Red Eye, a seven-to-five favorite from the Falaise Stable of H. F. Guggenheim.

The veteran Jim Fitzsimmons saddled the third and fourth horses in Ogden Phipps' Despondent and William Woodward's Wise Lady, respectively. Despondent lost the place by five lengths while holding two lengths margin over Wise Lady, heroine of the Delwaare Oaks but a disappointment since.

Redlin, second to Bill Farnsworth in a class "C" handicap at Empire City prior to her race today, ran the distance in 1:24, which was a new record for the test. This was the fifteenth running and the previous best time of 1:24 1-5 was shared by Conclave (1930) and Speed Boat (1933). Redlin carried 114 pounds as compared to Red Eye's 123.

Paying 13 to 5, Redlin collected $2,725 in purse money.

Those in the field named for the Alabama, top event of the meeting for three-year-old fillies, were Red Eye, Despondent, Wise Lady and Kindergarten.

The test was strictly a two-horse affair. The two "Reds" always held the others at bay. Redlin was urged into a length and a half lead over Red Eye. Don Meade, knowing his mount has a tendency to stop, saved enough for the final drive. His mount seemed beaten in the last sixteenth but Meade held her together to the wire in masterly fashion while Red Eye gained slightly with every stride.

Dink Templeton, Ill, Leaves Stanford for Year

Palo Alto, Calif., Aug. 3 (AP).—Robert L. (Dink) Templeton, who during 18 years at Stanford University gained a reputation as one of the greatest track coaches in the country, will not coach next season.

The developer of a long line of national and world champions has been granted a year's leave of absence, Dr. Thomas A. Storey, head of the Stanford physical education department, disclosed today.

Templeton, 42, has been in ill health for many years.

Dodgers Win, Gain Tie for Fifth Place

Brooklyn Beats Bucs, 4-1; Pressnell Hurls 8-Hit Game

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pulled themselves back into a tie for fifth place in the National League today with a 4-to-1 victory over the Pirates in their series finale.

Tot Pressnell, aided by three double plays, pitched a steady eight-hit game. The only run against him was scored by Max Butcher, the Pirates' newly-acquired pitcher, on two singles in the third.

Rookie Art Parks celebrated his elevation to Brooklyn's cleanup slot by getting a triple and scoring on Dolph Camilli's single in the sixth to knot the score, and driving in a run with a single in the ninth after two singles and a double had put the Dodgers in front with two runs in the seventh.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKYLIN, $4.90, $2.90, $2.40; NANCY'S BEST, $3.50, $2.70; DIESELONG, $3.20.

SKYLIN, beginning quickly, raced DIESELONG into defeat in the first three furlongs, opened up a long lead entering the homestretch and had enough in reserve to withstand NANCY'S BEST. The latter, well up in the early running, finished with good courage in the closing drive. DIESELONG, showing good speed, was unable to get to the front and weakened in the stretch run. BRIERLEY was ridden vigorously from the start, but failed to better her position.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:35½. Winner, Mrs. V. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT WATCH, $23.90, $8.40, $4.60; NIGHT PLAY, $3.90, $3.00; HALO, $4.10.

NIGHT WATCH followed close to the leaders early, stole through on the inside midway of the homestretch when TRAVELO bore out sharply with NIGHT PLAY, withstood a stout drive gamely and was up nearing the end. NIGHT PLAY forced a steady pace, engaged the pacemaker midway of the homestretch, met with interference and fought it out willingly. HALO bettered her position on the outside early, reached contention entering the homestretch, was blocked when the leaders swerved then finished disappointedly. TRAVELO set a fast pace and held on well after bearing out in the last eighth.

Daily Double, Seplin and Night Watch, Paid $91.40.

MARTINIOUS, steadied for the first mile, moved in pursuit of the pacemaker when JONTOON fell at the twelfth fence, reached GOLD SWEEPER nearing the fifteenth fence, went to the front readily and was kept under pressure to draw out at the end. GOLD SWEEPER, fencing nicely, opened up a long lead in the first mile, saved ground at all of his fences, but was unable to stay with the winner when caught. SHEEPSKIN, outrun from the start, was easily best of the others. WORTHFUL raced poorly and was never a factor.

Charlotte Decker Plays Marian Cunningham in Net Final

Miss Graham Scores in D.C. Consolation

Joan Bransford And Sally Whipple Lose in Semifinals Of Women's League

Defending Champion Charlotte Decker and unseeded Marian Cunningham yesterday advanced into the finals of the annual District Women's Tennis League Tournament and will meet for the title at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir Courts.

Miss Cunningham reached the championship round by an upset victory over second-seeded Joan Bransford, 5—7, 6—1, 6—1, while Miss Decker played methodically and steadily to defeat Sally Whipple, tournament "dark horse," 6—2, 6—4.

In semifinal consolation matches Margaret Graham, Columbia Club champion who was eliminated in a first-round upset, beat Mary Gray, 6—3, 6—3, and Ruth Rhetts turned back Gertrude Smith, 6—3, 7—5.

The consolation finals will be held this afternoon concurrently with the Decker-Cunningham match.

Miss Decker, bespectacled former playgrounds titleholder, received unexpectedly strong opposition from the youthful Miss Whipple, who is the No. 1 player of the Washington Golf and Country Club golf team. Her superior experience was a deciding factor.

The final doubles match scheduled yesterday between Charlotte Decker and Marian Cunningham and Joan Bransford and Frances Carter was postponed by darkness with the score tied at 3—2 in the first set. It will be resumed from the point of termination today following the singles final.

Rest for Arnovich

Manager Prothro, who benched Arnovich before the game, described his action as a brief rest cure for the slumping star and said he probably would return him to leftfield Saturday.

Coach Lobert was banished in the fifth for disputing a decision. An inning later Prothro stalked off the field to the Philly clubhouse when Umpire Larry Goetz refused to heed Prothro's protest on a third strike which Del Young claimed he fouled.

Case Slides Home Safely After Nonstop Flight Around Bases

George Case, the Nats' league-leading base stealer, hit a powerful triple to leftfield yesterday in the sixth inning of the game with the Browns, but wouldn't stop at third. Here he is hitting dirt after beating throw. Catcher Joe Glenn (No. 10) is shown leaping into the air for the catch. No. 11 is Relief Pitcher Johnny Whitehead, who was ushered out of the game on the next play—a triple by Buddy Lewis of the recipients ultimately crossed the plate.

Another reason why Washington won the ball game was George Case who had a near perfect afternoon. Case drew a walk, hit a single, a double and a triple and also found time to steal his thirty-fifth, thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh bases during the first two innings of the ball game.

Whatever chances the Browns had of restoring themselves to the ball game vanished in the eighth inning when, with Krakky finding some difficulty in retiring the side, the Browns put themselves out.

Walks 3 Batters

The wildness of Mills which Manager Haney was soon to find intolerable asserted itself in the first inning when he walked three of the first four batters to face him. Then a run scored and all hands were safe when Berardino made a tardy throw to second on Gelbert's grounder. Then Mickey Vernon delivered two more runs with a single to center.

Mills encountered more trouble in the fourth when the Nats' lead burgeoned to 7-2. Ferrell singled, Case doubled down the leftfield line, Lewis drove in two runs with a single to right and when Loane walked, so did Mills—out of the ball game. Bobby Estalella greeted Relief Pitcher Johnny Whitehead with a double to left that produced the third and fourth runs of the inning.

Whitehead lasted until the sixth inning when George Case and Buddy Lewis greeted him with triples before he got anybody out. Case's clout sailed into the left field corner and he crossed the plate when Julius Solters muffed the ball on the hop. Lewis' triple hit the fence in center and Bobby Estallella scored him with a long fly to Solters. By that time Roxie Lawson was pitching for the Browns.

In the eighth, they made motions as if to score a half dozen runs. Clift and Hoag singled and Krakky filled the bases with none out by walking Rookie Catcher Hal Spindell. But the next two batters—Bernardino and Christmas fouled out, and it appeared that Krakky would escape undamaged. Heffner singled to center, however, to drive two runs home and Krakky was again in trouble until Spindell obligingly provided the third out by stupidly attempting to go to third on Heffner's blow.

Bucky Harris decided to entrust Pete Appleton with the Nats' pitching in the ninth, which was all right with the 2,000 customers but no break at all for the Browns who went out one-two-three.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

Four Nats figure in Man of the Month point awards on the basis of performance in yesterday's victory over the Browns, with George Case the outstanding performer of the day.

To Case, four points, because he hit a single, double and triple, stole three bases and scored three runs.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he made three hits including a three-bagger and drove in a pair of runs.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he drove in three runs with a two-bagger and a sacrifice fly in addition to making a pair of brilliant catches.

Buddy Lewis	6	Estalella	2
George Case	6	Vernon	2
Dutch Leonard	5	Ken Chase	1
Angelo Giuliani	5	Jimmy Bloodworth	1

Red Sox Turn Back Cleveland, 17 to 6

Cleveland Makes Six Errors While Boston Takes Third of Four-Game Series; Winners Pole Out Total of 19 Hits

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 3.—The Boston Red Sox made it three out of four against Cleveland today, taking the series finale, 17 to 6, by merely letting the Indians beat themselves.

Six errors were charged up against the jittery Clevelandrs, who gave one of their worst performances here in years. Skeeter Webb, who is shortly to be consigned to Buffalo, committed two of the misplays, bringing his total for the Boston series to four.

The Red Sox, who poled out a total of 19 hits, led by only 8 to 6 as they went into the last of the eighth. At that point, however, they pounced on Johnny Broca for the start of a nine-run spree, Manager Joe Cronin coming to bat twice during the inning and doubling twice.

Johnny Allen was the losing pitcher, but he was more sinned against than sinning, for most of the seven runs the Sox scored off him could have been averted with airtight fielding. Although touched for ten hits, Jake Wade, the second of three Boston pitchers, was credited with his first victory of the year.

White Sox Win Over Athletics By 9-7 Count

Chicago Scores All Of Runs in Second, Third, Fourth Frames

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—The Chicago White Sox captured their series with the Athletics three games to one in a free-hitting affair today. The score was, 9 to 7, the Sox getting all their runs in the second, third and fourth innings.

Bob Johnson and Frankie Hayes featured the Athletics' attack with home runs in the third inning. Johnson's coming with two on was his fifteenth of the season. Hayes' has hit 13.

Ryan Pinned By Singh in 22 Minutes

Rosy Red Renews Match in Hectic Dressing Room Brawl

Rosy Red Ryan was subjected to Nanjo Singh's "cobra deathlock" for about three minutes last night at Turner's arena and lost the match, but he came back to win a moral victory in a dresing room brawl that outdid anything on the night's wrestling program.

Propelled out of the ring no less than four times by Ryan's beautifully timed dropkicks and rights to the jaw, Nanjo tired of this, hurled Rosy Red into the ropes and then clamped his pet clutch on him. Ryan was counted out at 22 minutes victory in a dressing-room brawl of the scheduled 90-minute affair. Three minutes later half a dozen spectators, the referee and various other unidentified gentlemen were still trying to get Nanjo to let go.

The hold broken, Rosy Red did a nice back dive to the canvass, where he lay until two doctors revived him. He came out fighting mad and invaded the shower room with murder in his eye. It remained there, however, and after breaking up bits of furniture and bending lockers the two adjourned their feud until a possible future date.

In the co-feature, Jack Hader beat Pete Managoff in 17 minutes with a series of body slams. Rudy Strongberg finished Tom Mahoney in 1½ minutes, Bibber McCoy beat Hank Metheny in 14 minutes and Chief Chewaki beat George Kondylis in 17 minutes in the preliminaries.

Promoter Mike Jacobs Invited To Attend Boxing Show Monday

New York Fight Mogul May Furnish Opponent For Mann-Dudas Winner

Promoter Mike Jacobs, the Nation's No. 1 boxing mogul, is expected to attend the Nathan Mann-Steve Dudas 10-round heavyweight fight Monday night at Griffith Stadium, to lend Col. Heinie Miller, vice president of the National Boxing Association, a hand in lining up a spectacular heavyweight match for the N. B. A.'s national convention here in September.

Miller, District Boxing Commission secretary, is seeking Buddy Baer or Schmeling for the winner of the Dudas-Mann affair, and has wired Jacobs asking him to attend Monday night's business and bring his New York staff along with him.

Jacobs, now setting the stage for the world's title fight between Champion Joe Louis and Bob Pastor in Detroit, has a monopoly not only on the services of Baer and Schmeling, but also all the better known heavyweight talent.

"Jacobs is his own talent scout and he is the one man who can help us in getting an outstanding opponent for Mann or Dudas," Miller said. Miller, who boomed Tony Galento for the No. 1 challenger's spot in the face of barrages of criticism, is held in high esteem by Jacobs—as a matter of fact, local boxing moguls believe Jacobs is "duty bound" to accept Miller's "S O S" invitation.

The local boys, incidentally, are calling for their last card on the all-heavyweight boxing show Monday, which presents 2,060 pounds of beef and brawn.

Cheered by the largest advance ticket sale in two years, Promoter Joe Turner is regarding the weather as his chief worry now. If the show is a financial failure he plans to retire to his wrestling farm on W street.

The supporting cast, presenting a talented array of heavyweights, brings together in 6-round bouts Maynard Daniels and Jake Friedman; Ralph Ivans and Al Lohman; Jim Wilson and Odell Jackson, and Al Hart and Abner Powell, jr.

Rich enough in Havana taste to please a Cuban, this brand new Blended-with-Havana cigar
YOU CAN BET that down in Havana smokers really know the taste of Havana tobacco. That's why we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl down there to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs of cigars—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.
Honestly, we're excited about the Havana tobacco that goes into our new White Owl. It's really a good grade. Perhaps that sounds unbelievable for a cigar costing only 5¢. But we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco, and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type of Havana tobacco used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this fine Havana in each new White Owl, too. Why not try a new White Owl today?
New INVINCIBLE
Your choice of 2 shapes
Another "10¢" feature—now years for 5¢ . . . a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

Host Teams Win Recreation Swim Meets

Takoma, Georgetown And McKinley Girls Score, Respectively

The Takoma girls ran up a total of 112 points at the Takoma pool, and Hamilton finished second with 7 points. McKinley also had an easy time, amassing 52 points to seven for McMillan, in second place. Georgetown swimmers scored 83 points at the Georgetown pool while Columbia Recreation Center finished second with 8 points.

The meets are being conducted at each pool as final events. Only the boys' meets will have elimination contests. The Rosedale playground holds its meet for girls tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

Virginia Dairy Girls Play Sholl's Tonight in Ballston

The Virginia Dairy Girls, 1936 State champions, will meet Sholl's Cafeteria, last year's District of Columbia champions, at Ballston Park tonight in the first half of a double-header starting at 8 o'clock.

Sholl's has the more impressive record, being undefeated for three years, while the Virginia team has lost two games in two years, but expects to have considerable trouble solving the offerings of Betsy Thomas, their foes' star fireball pitcher.

In the nightcap of this attractive twin bill the Arlington Democrats will meet Nate & Leon, of Baltimore, at 9 o'clock. Either Steffes or Plaisted are expected to pitch for Democrats, while the Baltimoreans will probably start Perlman.

Southeast Boys In All-Star Ring Show Today

Ray Kennedy meets Bernie Padget in the opener—an 80-pound class event. Bro Cross meets Charles Kodgak in the 100-pound division; Charles and Danny Petro, brothers, and 1938 Golden Gloves champions, meet in the 115-pound class; Jack Smith and George Caprilla meet in the 135-pound class, and Motts Galasso and Eddie Lambert will box the feature unlimited match.

The matches are staged every month under sponsorship of the D. C. Recreation Center. No admission is charged, Sam Fox, director of the playground, said.

St. Michaels Jammed With Regatta Fans

By the Associated Press

St. Michaels, Md., Aug. 3.—Hundreds of power and sail boat owners, ready to send their craft into the stiffest competition offered on Chesapeake Bay, gathered at the Miles River Yacht Clubhouse tonight for the annual get-together and welcoming program preceding each year's regatta.

Tomorrow they will start their boats on a two-day program of racing which will see simultaneous activity on three courses, two for sailboats and one for the water-churning speedboats.

The Miles River regatta, largest on the bay and usually the climax to the summer regatta season, annually attracts sportsmen from along the Atlantic Seaboard and is a favorite of the scores of boat owners in the bay towns.

The program includes sailing races for sloops, cutters, yawls, schooners, stars, comets, log canoes, knockabouts, crickets, scrappy cats, Hampton one design, albatross, sneakboxes, snipes, moths and 14 and 10 foot dinghies.

Alexandra, Lee Start for Nats, Tigers Today

Alex Alexandra, restored to a starting role by Manager Bucky Harris following a brilliant six-inning relief shift against the Tigers, will go to the mound today in the opening of a three-game series with the White Sox.

It will be Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium.

Jimmy Dykes' White Sox, the mid-summer sensations of the league, have been occupying third place for nearly a month, upsetting pre-season predictions.

Indians Bolster Crippled Infield

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians, to bolster their crippled infield, recalled Second Baseman Ray Mack and Shortstop Lou Boudreau from the Buffalo International League club today.

Business Manager Frank Kohlbecker, who announced the long-talked-of move, said the Indians would send Jimmy Webb, their present shortstop, to Steve O'Neill's outfit on 36-hour recall to help the International Leaguers close the gap.

7-Up A. C. to Travel To Meet Waynesboro

The 7-Up Athletic Club baseball team will travel to Waynesboro, Va., for single games with the town team Saturday and Sunday. The teams divided a double-header earlier this season, but Manager Connie Wyche, of the Drinkmen, sees a double victory this time since his boys have won six of their last eight starts.

State Open Begins On Hillendale Course Tuesday

Due to the conflict with the Maryland Open practice rounds, Monday's Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament at Army and Navy has been postponed until a later date, according to the association secretary, Bill Schreiber, Mount Pleasant professional.

The Maryland State Golf Association will post the usual $300 prize money for the State Open title Tuesday at the Hillendale course, in Towson. A majority of the local pros will play the course Monday in a trial round and stay overnight for the 36-hole grind starting early Tuesday morning.

Cox Won't Compete

Although Wiffy Cox will not compete due to a previously scheduled trip, the remainder of the District pros will battle for the $120 prize money, won last year by Andy Gibson, the Bonnie View pro that will head the list of Baltimore players.

Al Houghton, four-time champion, three in succession; Leo Walper, two-time Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champ, and George Diffenbaugh, who won the pro-sweepstakes over the course recently with a 67, top the local entries, that include two former champions, Gene Larkin and Cliff Spencer. Another former champion, Fred McLeod, Columbia pro, will not compete.

With the course dry and playing long due to the lack of recent rains, a score of three or four under par should be necessary to cop the State crown, if played under ordinary conditions, Charles Betschler, host pro and 1925 champion, and '36 Middle Atlantic P. G. A. titleholder, will also be one of the favored players.

Heads Contingent

Bobby Brownell, playing better golf due to his recent trip to the Intercollegiates, Western and Transmississippi amateurs will head the amateur contingent after the crown, that will find Otto Greiner, Baltimore match play Open champion, best of the host city simon-pures entered.

A feature of Monday's practice rounds will be a renewal of the latest friendly rivalry among the local pros, Leo Walper and Al Houghton, who have yet to taste defeat, against the short but powerful twosome of George Diffenbaugh and Bob Barnett. Houghton's 15-foot birdie putt on the eighteenth won the first match last week at Chevy Chase.

Cardinals' Nine to Meet Charlottesville Sunday

The Washington Cardinals unlimited baseball team, bolstered by the addition of several high school stars, will travel to Charlottesville, Va., Sunday for a double-header with the home town team. The Cardinals and Charlottesville have met three times this season, the locals winning only one game.

Manager Taft requests all Cardinal players to report for practice today at 5 o'clock on the Taft-Burroughs Playground.

Roosevelt Ten Seeking

The Roosevelt Boys Club unlimited softball team, presently in the midst of a hot streak in the District of Columbia Recreation League, would like to book night games with the teams having fields. Call Alvin Oremland after 7:30 p. m. at CO. 1608.

National Title Golf Entry Lists Close Within 10 Days

Entries for the forty-third Women's Amateur Championship close Wednesday, August 9, with Joseph C. Dey, jr., United States Golf Association, 73 East Fifty-sevnth street, New York, N. Y.

Forms, available at all Women's Golf Associations, must be certified by the Association Secretary and accompany the $5 entrance fee. The handicap limit is eight strokes.

Entries for the forty-third National Amateur close Monday, August 14, at 5 p. m., at the same address, with the handicaps limited to amateurs with 3 or less. Forms, certified by officers and including the $5 entrance fee must be filled.

The women's championship will be played August 21-26 at the Wee Burn Club, Noroton, Conn., August 21-26. The men's title play will be over the North Shore Country Club, Glenview, Ill., near Chicago, September 11-16.

Bill Ackerman's Column On Fishing

The many local anglers journeying to North Carolina fishing ports this summer are having Florida fishing thrills in larger doses than they ever enjoyed with their winter angling. And this all due to the great number of amberjack that have practically taken possession of the wrecks and offshore reefs on the edge of the Gulf Stream.

ACKERMAN

The amberjack isn't the top-water fighter the dolphin is, or, on occasion, the barracuda, but they are tough right down to the last breath, and their dogged determination to stay close to their life-giving reefs has turned victory into defeat for many an angler. To check the powerful, surging runs of the amberjack a 4-0 reel is about the smallest the angler can get by with; at least 250 yards 18-thread line. A 6-0 and 24-thread is better, with a 8-0 or 9-0 hook and a 12 or 15 foot wire leader. Amberjack are usually caught drifting over the reefs and, like our yellow perch and the dolphin, are suckers for that game of follow the leader; if a bait is kept over while one fish is on, another is caught almost immediately.

On the North Carolina coast amberjack average a mere 15 to 20 pounds, less than half the average weight of the fish taken on the Florida coast, but there are many here that will weigh close to 40. The largest ever noted was 50 pounds. The world record amberjack, caught in Florida, weighed 95 pounds.

Also on the North Carolina coast, according to Aycock Brown, the fishing sage of Southport, they are taking sheepshead in real numbers. In particular, a specimen weighing 18 pounds, caught by a youngster from Sanford, Fla., who, seeing it feeding around the pilings of an old dock on Ocracoke Island, spent several days of patient angling to accomplish the feat.

Many books give "No authentic record available" on the record weight of the best of the sheepshead clan, merely giving the probable top weight as around 20 pounds, so with this fish, Brown is claiming that an authentic record is now available.

We note this sheepshead catch for two reasons, because it is interesting, and for a comparison to those being caught here in our own Chesapeake Bay, even though old-timers say they haven't been caught here in a quarter of a century.

There isn't a year goes by but what more than a few are taken in Maryland waters, and so their presence this year can hardly be attributed to the dry weather of early summer. Those anglers who have consistently fished old piling and wrecks, such as that of the Texas off Tangier Island, know that the convict-striped bait-stealer of the Florida reefs is a regular summer visitor.

Granted that this season they seem to be here in greater numbers than for several years, but, then, hasn't this been a season far above normal for 'most every species?

The first sheepshead we noted were caught under Little Cove Point by one of Capt. Harry Woodburn's boats nearly two weeks ago. There were an even half-dozen taken, and they averaged nearly 6 pounds. Next, there was the catch of Capt. Randolph Harrison, of Tilghman's, fishing off Sharps Island, when three large ones were caught. The following day, also from Harrison's boat, a fish weighing 13½ pounds was caught in the same place, while on Sunday two more were boated, weighing 11½ and 15 pounds.

These catches were made while chumming striped bass with live shore shrimp, the last word in sheepshead baits, and with the continuance of this chumming, new to lower bay fishing guides, on hard or shell bottom, we venture the guess this fine game fish will be taken in increasing numbers.

That they are exceptional in the quality of their flesh is a myth. The one way the meat is reasonably acceptable is boiled, and only then with well-seasoned cream sauce.

On Monday, only 60 white marlin were caught off Ocean City, and Tuesday a mere 25. These were off days, if one lends an ear to those anglers in on the big days of last week. Yet, a short ten days ago, either catch would have been considered good going.

Those big days however, were productive of something more than excitement and records. They saw the fruition of an idea, the seed of which was planted late in July of last year—the tagging and release of white marlin, so that something might be learned of their migrations, their habits and life cycles.

On Monday of this week alone, from two boats, the Hilda II of Capt. Crawford Savage and the Sampon of Capt. Leo Droughton, eight fish were tagged and released out of ten (five on each) caught. These are fish that when caught again, will have a story for the scientists of the Bureau of Fisheries, and which put up, for the anglers taking them, every bit as good a battle as if they had been boated, and fish that rate their counting as a catch and the flying of a marlin flag.

More than 20 charter boats and private craft have aboard the necessary tools and tags for the marking of the released fish, and up to, and including Monday, 61 had been tagged with the celuloid disc through the gill cover and the rubber band, impervious to salt water, that is slipped over the bill.

At least another hundred should be marked and released this season if a real foundation is to be laid in this undertaking. Swepson Earle, the representative of the Bureau of Fisheries at Ocean City for the run, deserves more than a little credit for his untiring efforts to instill the idea in the minds of the anglers, but the captains and mates of the charter boats deserve more in the handling of the fish and the final accomplishment, which at the best is a mean job. Sixty or seventy pounds of a real tough proposition, battling for life, often leaves one wondering who is tagging which.

A local youngster, Jimmie Barnhart, the 11-year-old son of Dr. J. L. Barnhart, fishing this week from their 39-foot cruiser, Southwind, had his first go-round with the big jumpers and landed a 36 pounder in 35 minutes. Another Washington angler Sen. A. O. Stanley landed his first fish out of Chincoteague on the Virginia coast.

Tommy Aitken, Director of the greatest fishing tournament on earth (the Metropolitan Miami, if you don't know) got off Trip No. 3 of the Great Silver Fleet long enough to chew over a little fishing news on the 'phone.

Because Tommy is running Al Pflueger's plant this summer, while Al is in Ocean City and along the Jersey coast, we couldn't help asking him to keep a sharp eye on our many interests, and get them back up here as soon as possible.

First, the great 608½ pound blue marlin caught by a local angler, Edward M. Weld, a few weeks ago in Bimini. It is the third largest ever caught in North American waters, and is being mounted by Eastern Air Lines for presentation to the United States Bureau of Fisheries. Charles Jackson, acting commissioner, had already acctped, so we are assured of the permanent display here of a really fine specimen.

Then there is that tiny 6-ounce sailfish we noted a few days ago, and the 11-inch dolphin (according to Al Pflueger the smallest ever caught on the Florida coast measured 15 inches) that was caught by Capt. Lev Raymond on the Lev-Lou early this week, and which is also being mounted for our personal collection.

Early last month Raymond Lurba regaled Washington Waltonians with marlin steaks with the aid of Capt. Raymond in supplying the big fish. Wednesday another shipment arrived, also through the courtesy of Capt. Raymond, and there is so much of it this time that it will be included on the menu as long as it lasts. So, if you haven't been lucky enough to have a friend who has caught a marlin, by all means look in on the Neptune and eat fish that tastes like neither fish nor fowl nor meat, but a little like all.

Hardheads are biting in real early season form at the Gooses and Diamond shoals—in fact, they have never stopped, and boats out of Kenwood, Breezy Point and North Beach are bringing in catches many evenings as large as at any time this year.

Capt. Taft Tippett reports seeing two cobia, and the catch, by other boats, of three channel bass. One by way of trolled lure, and the other two by bottom fishing.

Those trout are spreading up the bay, for Solomons Island boats have been taking them, too, on the other side of the bay by the Red Nun. Capt. Rhodie Langley tells us of two catches of stripers, by way of chumming and the soft crab methods. And while we have it in mind, when you make your reservations for this fishing, let us recommend that you follow their instructions as to the best time to fish.

Schools of stripers have been raising off Holland Point, in Herring Bay, off West River and at Thomas Point, at the mouth of South River. Some fair catches have been made out of all of them, but only by those boats lucky enough to be right there when they raised—usually early morning and just before dark.

District Car Registrations Increase 53%

2,520 Reported in June, 14,075 in First Half

Registration of new passenger cars in the District of Columbia in June totaled 2,520 as compared with 1,643 in the previous month, a gain of 53 per cent, according to the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank for the Fifth District. For the first six months of this year registrations were 14,075 which compares with 9,299 in the same period last year, an increase of 51 per cent.

The review states that building construction continues at the highest levels since April, 1930, and that June permits were the highest of any month since July, 1929. The District of Columbia led the Fifth District in construction contracts last month with a total of $18,858,000, an increase of 135 per cent above the total of $8,016,000 in June, 1938.

July Postal Receipts Set Record

Washington postoffice receipts in July exceeded all previous records for that month it was reported yesterday. Receipts for the month totaled $575,905 as compared with $527,554 for July, 1938; $536,818 in July, 1937, and $23,890 in the same month of 1936.

Postoffice officials stated that July was the twelfth consecutive month in which receipts were ahead of the corresponding month in the previous year. For the first seven months of this year, receipts amounted to $4,391,760 against $4,099,375 for the same period last year.

Bank Clearings Gain

The volume of check transactions for the current period continued to expand, the turnover again exceeding the amount for the like 1938 week by a wide margin. Total bank clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended August 2, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $5,485,032,000, up 13.3 per cent from the $4,841,380,000 recorded for the same week last year.

Clearings for the latest period increased $287,776,000 from the total for the week preceding, as compared with a gain of $190,140,000 between the two similar weeks of 1938.

United Airlines Net Is $216,123

United Air Lines netted $216,123.11, after all charges, for the second quarter of 1939, equivalent to 14.4 cents a share of stock outstanding, compared with a net loss of $243,030.84 for the same quarter in 1938.

Operations during the first half of 1939 resulted in a net loss of $202,962.05, contrasted with a loss of $910,701.41 in the first half of last year.

During the three months ended June 30 the company flew 37,896,785 revenue passenger miles, a 30 per cent increase over the 1938 quarter. The company flew 1,341,154,398 mail pound miles, an 8 per cent increase over 1938, and 435,639,076 express miles, a gain of 30 per cent over the second quarter of 1938.

Brokers' Loans Drop $22,000,000 in Week

Western Pacific Prepared for Reorganization

By the Associated Press.

The Western Pacific Railroad, describing itself as "ripe for immediate reorganization," asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to approve reorganization plans which have been agreed on by the railroad and its principal creditors.

The plan differs only in minor details from the commission's plans of June 21. The Western Pacific said in its petition today that during the four years it has been in reorganization under section 77 of the bankruptcy act the company had been rehabilitated at a cost of $10,000,000 and now was up to date.

Total funded debt under the agreed plan is $33,969,125, compared with $38,876,600 under the commission's plan. Total annual charges are placed at $1,969,896, against $1,949,060 in the commission's plans.

Auto Financing System to Be Investigated

Committee Named To Report on 'Abuses' Of Credit Buying

By the United Press.

Detroit, Aug. 3.—The American Automobile Association has announced its intention to delve into alleged abuses in the financing of automobiles and auto accessories.

Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, president of the AAA, has appointed a national committee with Judge A. G. Newcomb, of Cleveland, as chairman to investigate what he termed the "gyp fringe" in car financing. He said elimination of abuses in this field will benefit car buyers and also the greater part of the auto financing industry.

"Co-operation of other groups will be sought in working out a program of action to end depredations by the racketeering minority," Henry said.

All Phases to Be Investigated

The committee will investigate exorbitant finance charges; finance packs, through which a portion of a fictitiously high charge is rebated to the dealer; balloon notes, in which the final payment is many times higher than the regular monthly installment; finance kiting, by which a contract is shifted from one company to another until the buyer, not knowing where to make payment, is forced into default, and other abuses that have resulted because of the one-sidedness of laws covering installment buying of automobiles, he said.

W. David Tilghman, former Maryland Commissioner of Loans, has been made a member of the committee chiefly because of his work in uncovering abuses in the auto finance field in Maryland which led to the belief among AAA officials that the unsavory condition was Nation-wide.

Saturation Point Estimated

Milan V. Ayres, analyst for the National Association of Sales Finance Companies, believes the saturation point for automobiles will be reached when the number of passenger cars exceeds 18.5 per cent of the total population, or when there are 10 cars in use for every 54 persons.

Ayres also estimates that the number of new automobiles that can be absorbed annually in the United States for domestic use should average 2,589,000 for the next eight years.

Freight Loadings Up 12.1% in Year

By the United Press.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended July 29 totaled 659,764 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 71,067 cars or 12.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938, but a decrease of 119,327 cars or 15.3 per cent below the same week in 1937.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of July 29 was an increase of 3,423 cars, or five-tenths of 1 per cent, above the preceding week. Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 255,273 cars, an increase of 1,870 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 31,184 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

$50,000 Fee Allowed

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 3 (AP).—Legal fees of $50,000 were allowed by Judge John P. Nields in United States District Court today in a final decree in the reorganization of Eastern Utilities Investing Corporation.

Late Profit-Taking Cuts Earlier Advances; Trading Dull With Volume Over a Million Shares; Bonds Are Higher

New York, Aug. 3.—Early strength in the stock market today gave way in the afternoon to extreme dullness, and then a closing quarter-hour of profit taking, which virtually canceled the day's progress. Plus signs were in a slight majority, but the gain of the composite average was only 0.07 point, and the volume was just over the 1,000,000 shares mark.

Metals turned in the best performance, aided by a boost in domestic copper following an advance in London. Lead also was marked up in New York and St. Louis. The copper price advance was the third within a month.

Public Utilities continued to feature the tape and they enjoyed a good advance in early dealings but gave it up in the late reaction. The day's four most active stocks were utilities, namely Commonwealth & Southern, National Power & Light, Columbia Gas & Electric and Electric power & Light. Statistical and political news held to the favorable side.

New Deal Receives Setback

In the political arena the Roosevelt Administration received another vote of lack of confidence. The House voted against considering the $800,000,000 housing bill. On the previous day Congressman Sabath, New Deal chairman of the Rules Committee, was quoted to the effect that the bill would not even be brought out, because it too would be killed. However a vote was taken on the rules and the result showed the Administration might just as well have let the matter drop Wednesday.

President's Prediction Fails to Appear

This was the third major defeat sustained by the Administration in three days. Neither business nor the security markets have sustained any serious reactions. If the nice little business boom, which the President alleged was stopped when the Senate refused to follow his lead on neutrality legislation, has really been stopped, the figures don't reflect it, and security markets tell the same story.

It is quite true that the breaks which Congress has set against spending will prove unsettling to certain companies which had expected to get a cut of the Federal largesse, but for the people as a whole the course of wisdom is to stop the spree before it goes too far. Congress has realized this, and the improvement in sentiment among investors is apparent in the financial district. The legislative branch of the Government has said that it is time to consider human rights of taxpayers rather than property rights of those who can make a case before a Federal spending bureau.

At the same time the financial district realizes that the pressure of the New Deal forces for record appropriations will be doubled at the next session of Congress, meeting in January. For that will be an election year, and it will be make or break between two schools of economic thought. At the moment the spending school is in a state of complete liquidation. It has had six years in which it has adopted a formidable list of new economic doctrines, and it has failed.

Private Spending Is Opposite View

The opposite of public spending is private investment and the question is whether, given relief from opposition from the executive branch of the Government, private enterprise can take up the slack in employment and revive business to the point where tax revenues will meet the increased Federal expenditures. The assumption of the orthodox school of economists is that it will; certainly, it is worth a try, especially when we consider the lack of success of the opposite theories which have been trotted out for six years.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, a die-hard of the spending school, put in a few demands for more farm money today, which may delay the adjournment of Congress. Here again the record is not to the credit of the New Deal, for the farm program of the last few years have failed to raise agricultural prices to the extent promised and our export trade has been penalized, to a tragic extent in the case of cotton.

Listed bonds moved slowly higher in a quiet session, today. High grade investment bonds were not much traded, and quotations generally were unchanged. But speculative issues advanced impressively, with medium-priced railroad securities leading the advance.

Treasury Issues Lower

Both long and medium term United States Treasury issues tended to drift lower, owing to the tendency of banks to adjust portfolios for the September financing. Losses ranged from 1-32 to 7-32 point. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also were soft. Leading utility, railroad and industrial bonds remained idle at or close to highs of the year.

Railroad bonds rallied from the effects of the postponement of rail aid legislation in Washington. Advances ranged to a point or more in representative issues of New York Central, Southern Pacific and similar roads. The borderline carriers also were in demand, while default issues were dull. Local traction bonds were in modest demand. Alleghany Corp. bonds rose sharply, but utility holding issues were more moderately improved. Western Union and Postal Telegraph bonds resumed their advance.

Foreign Bonds Generally Down

Hardly any business was done in German bonds in the foreign section, but traders reported a lowering of bids in view of the attitude adopted by the S. E. C., which is supposed to aid American investors. Japanese bonds fell again, and touched fresh lows. Italian and Polish bonds were motionless. Panama stamped 5s advanced, but the non-assented issue fell 4¾ points. Other Latin-American default issues showed small gains.

Security Trading Values in June Decrease 6.2%

The market value of sales on all registered securities in June amounted $683,439,040, a decrease of 6.2 per cent from the value of sales in May and a decrease of 29.9 per cent from June 1938, the Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday. Stock sales, including rights and warrants, had a market value of $555,733,715, a decrease of 7.8 per cent from May. Bond sales were valued at $127,703,150, an increase of 1.8 per cent over May.

The volume of trading in stocks, including rights and warrants, in June was 21,915,687 shares, a decrease of 5.3 per cent from May's total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $169,640,805, an increase of 1.2 per cent over May. The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 94.0 per cent of the value of all sales, 92.7 per cent of stock sales and 99.7 per cent of bond sales, on all registered exchanges.

$132,000,000 Issue Scheduled by Power & Light Co.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. will enter the money market next week for funds totaling $132,000,000, the biggest transaction undertaken in the power and light field under the securities act, it was reported in Wall street today.

The company will offer through a nation-wide syndicate, $95,000,000 first mortgage 3½ per cent bonds and $28,500,000 in 4½ per cent debentures and is expected to sell privately to large commercial banks $8,500,000 in 2¾ per cent promissory notes.

Proceeds from the financing will be used principally for redeeming currently outstanding obligations with the remainder devoted to general corporate purposes.

Southern Maryland Tobacco Markets

Highest average prices for the season are reported by the Agricultural Marketing Service for tobacco sold on the auction floors at Hughesville and Upper Marlboro, Md., on July 28, 31 and August 1. All qualities followed the upward trend, except some of the off-color greens and yellows, which continued steady. The quality of the offerings at both points has greatly improved and floors have been full. Nondescript screen sold at from $2.75 to $3.50 and an occasional basket of choice quality bright crop sold up to $42.

Fuller Views Heavy Taxes As 'Sabotage'

Urges Restoration Of 12% Level as Prosperity Spur

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 3.—Walter D. Fuller, of Philadelphia, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., said today "if taxation could be restored to the 1925-29 level of 12 per cent of income" there would be a "sweep of prosperity."

Mr. Fuller, speaking at a development meeting sponsored by members of the National Association of Manufactufers, said the business men of the country were faced with the job of leading "the way out of the depression."

The speaker said taxes were putting the brakes on recovery. "We have had the most serious depression in our history," he added. "The greatest era of unemployment any nation has known and yet Government continues to take more and more out of our economy through taxation.

"This is not a paradox: it is economic sabotage—innocent, perhaps, but nevertheless devastating.

"The net effect of Governmentally-inspired cost increases," he said, "cannot be measured exactly in dollars and cents, because it spreads into such intangibles as the wages and hour law, Labor Relations Board policies, foreign trade treaties and many other spheres of business activity.

"But what can be measured is the fact that 22 cents out of every dollar of national income in 1938 was turned over directly to the tax collectors, Federal, State and local. That is pressure that is real and destructive. Compare that figure of taxation last year with the fact that in the early 1900s taxation took but 6.7 per cent of the national income."

Fuller said the "hidden taxes in this country are so invisible as a result of their ramifications that it is difficult to get any sort of picture of them. But it is estimated that about 33 cents out of every dollar earned now goes to Government—Federal, State and local—directly or is mortgaged for the future by deficits being paid up, eventually to be paid off in tax-monies."

Cotton Futures Dip In Light Trading

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—The cotton futures market was sensitive to shifting trade winds today. Thin dealings left final prices unchanged to 2 points lower. Two factors, brokers said, kept traders moving warily:

1. Secretary Wallace's statement that a sharp break in commodity prices could create a situation analagous to 1932 provided that Congress refused to make more funds available for crop loans; and

2. The Government's 1939 crop estimate due next Tuesday.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures fluctuated nervously today as the market tried to gauge effect of recent Congressional developments on agricultural price trends. The market closed 5 lower to 1 point higher on sales of 132 contracts.

September finished 5.70 (b), October 5.76 (b), December 5.93, January 5.97 (b), March 6.08. (b)—Bid.

Construction Awards Up 13% in Week

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday, totaling $47,478,000, increased 13 per cent from the previous week, but fell 17 per cent short of the corresponding week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

A spurt in commercial and industrial building, however, lifted the volume of private construction 83 per cent higher than the week before and 51 per cent above a year ago. Public awards were 8 per cent lower than the previous week and 34 per cent less than the same week last year.

Doubles Dividend

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Acme Steel Co. today announced a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable September 12 to holders or record August 18. In the two preceding quarters dividends of 25 cents a share each on the common stock were paid.

Britain Granted Subsidy

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday it would pay an export subsidy on flour sold to Great Britain for an indefinite period. The initial rate, subject to change from day to day, was set at $1.40 a barrel.

Dread Paralysis Skips Over D. C. This Year

Health Authorities Pray Low Rate in U. S. Will Last Through August

Public health authorities breathed a prayer yesterday that the unusually low infantile paralysis rate in the District and throughout the country may continue.

Washington has not had a single case this year.

For the country at large, 176 cases were reported during the week ended July 29. The median for that particular week in the year is 257 cases, according to the United States Public Health Service.

Apparently the only danger spot in the Nation last week was Michigan, where 29 cases were reported, compared with 17 for the previous week. Most of the 29 were in Detroit.

South Carolina and California, where an alarming amount of poliomyelitis has occurred recently, reported more encouraging figures last week. The former had 12 cases, same as the previous seven-day period, and California had 46, a decrease of 5 cases.

August, according to public health officials, is one of the most dangerous poliomyelitis months in the year.

Holt Delays Trip To Norway to Balk 2 Appointments

By the Associated Press

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, postponed his trip to Norway and showed up unexpectedly in the Senate yesterday, just in time to change the destiny of two would-be postmasters.

The nominations of John Kenna Kerwood, of Ripley, W. Va., and Charles B. McCray, Webster Springs, W. Va., had been held up in the Postoffice Committee until Thursday at the request of Holt.

"Then," Holt told reporters, "three hours after I was supposed to have sailed from New York for Norway, the committee met and sent them to to the floor."

The Senate yesterday sent the nominations back to the committee.

3 Senators to Report On Merrimac Memorial

Vice President Garner yesterday appointed Senators Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia; Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, and Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, as Senate members of the commission to report on a site, design and cost of a memorial in Hampton Roads, Va., to the battle of the Merrimac and Monitor.

Three members from the House will be named by Speaker Bankhead.

WINNER ON AIR. Adele Van, who won the recent "talent contest" at the Roger Smith Roof Garden, will be one of the singing stars on WRC'S "Cameras in Action" hour this evening, according to a telephonic bulletin from Radioman Bob Callahan. He added happily, if cryptically, that Adele is "going places."

After Adele carols "I Poured My Heart Into a Song" over the air waves, she'll go up to the Roger Smith Roof Garden and warble for the guests in general, but more particularly for R.-S. Manager Daniel Wathey, who, of all things! has never met her. He was away on a business trip (we think) while Adele was panicking the R. S. roof as a talent contestant. Adele is booked to sing in the hotel's Cafe Caprice this fall.

PENGUINS' TRANSFORMATIONS. Most of the Metronome Room Penguins started out to play one instrument, wound up with another. Saxaphonist Bob Holben used to be a piano player. Bassist Joe Forti formerly toyed with the violin. Pat Olmstead was a 'cellist before he took up sax and clarinet. Trumpeter Bill Dunmore used to blow a bugle (for the Boy Scouts?). Drummer Gene Latto studied piano for years, still plays a fine piano at occasional Metronome interludes.

PARADOXES. Carlton Lounge. Here's a favorite foregathering spot for big shots of the practical variety—politicians, business executives and the like. And while they like light operatic tunes as played by the Carlton Trio, they reserve their more outspoken enthusiasm for the masterpieces of Puccini and Wagner.

King Cole Room. The Cocomos all speak Hawaiian fluently, but have never been in Hawaii. They learned it on the West Coast, where they worked for six years before coming East a few weeks ago.

H. Hat. One of Al Lewis' best songs is "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise." The sentiment he pours into it! We get it confidentially that he hasn't seen a sunrise for 15 years.

BROWN DERBY QUIZ. Al Simmonds and George Berg are planning a quiz session to end all quiz sessions. Reading a dictionary won't help you. You'll have to pick the answers right out of the air.

VACATION DAYS. Lotus' Bill Strickland has gone a-fishing off the coast of the Carolines. He's placing his hopes of successful angling in the hands of Trumpeter Bix Ramsey's daddy, who's said to be able to coax the fish to jump right into the boat . . . Manager P. J. McGroary, of the Rainbow Room, and his attractive missus are off for a spot of vacation that'll include the World's Fair and points North. Said Mr. McGroary, reflectively, "I'll bet it's nice at Saratoga now. Rockingham's all right, too." . . . Singer-saxophonist Jimmy Nichols, of the Lounge Riviera, has shuffled off to Buffalo with pretty Mrs. Nichols and Jimmy, jr. They'll be back soon . . . Comes a card from Messieur Martin of the Madrillon, now at Asbury Park. He says he's feasting on shish kabob and dolma, but misses his narghileh.

CAMERA ROGUERY. Sprightly Countess de Bournat (Maryland Gardens) has a task on her hands trying to keep Singer Sydney Boyd from showing the recent candid camera shots he took when she wasn't looking. They show the Countess in pants (and we mean pants, not slacks). But it's not the garb, it's the elevations that make the pix. If you know what we mean.

ECHO'S BIG PROGRAM. Glen Echo will wind up the summer in a blaze of rapidly succeeding ace orchestras. The prize bands of the season will return in a sequence of one-week engagements. When "Tiny" Hill leaves, Jimmy Livingston and his band from Murray's in New York will arrive on August 14. Wally Stoefler will come in on August 21. "Little Joe" Hart will play from August 28 until Labor Day, when Cecil Golly and his orchestra will arrive and play through until the season's wind-up on September 9.

FALL REMODELING. The second floor of Dick's Grill will be remodeled in preparation for the fall opening. Decorations will be in a bright modernist effect. Right now Dick is scouting around for another smart Spanish dance unit of the type that proved so popular last season.

HOT WEATHER TID-BITTING. It'll refresh you just to look at that "All Nations Parfait" at Mayfair. And your palate will back up the judgement of your eyes . . . There must be some secret in the way they make the peach ice cream at the Shoreham. They could call it ambrosia and still be right . . . The frozen Nesselrode glace in the Neptune Room will cool you off and perk you up . . . The goden banty corn is now ripe out at O'Donnell's Farms. Top it off with a big dish of blueberries and cream . . . The crab meat cocktails at Hall's are so cold and tasty that they'll give you an ambition to eat a full seafood dinner.

A. T. & S. WAY. There's nothing like a spot of fresh air to give you an appetite. The new A. T. & S. Barbecue is only 4 or 5 miles down the Alexandria pike. You'll find it fresh and attractive, with good food and prompt service.

Navy Praises Engineering of 52 Officers

Lieut. E. J. Chase, of Washington, Among Those Commended

Fifty-two naval officers were commended yesterday by the Navy Department for the "outstanding performances" of their ships in winning engineering competition honors last year.

The New Mexico was announced as the winner among the battleships, and its commander, Capt. W. F. Jacobs, will be sent a personal letter of commendation from the Chief of Naval Operations. The ship's engineering officer, Lieut. Comdr. H. D. Power, also will be commended, it was said.

A Washingtonian, Lieut. (junior grade) Edgar J. Chase, won recognition for contributing to the record of his ship, the Stewart, which placed second among the destroyers of the Asiatic Squadron.

Ships winning the competition for their class can paint a large white "E" on their smokestacks. Runners-up similarly display a red "E." The list of ships and officers commended follow:

Battleships (second place)—Colorado. Capts. Thomas Withers and C. R. Robinson, commanding; Lieut. Comdr. P. H. Wiedorn, engineering officer.

Cruisers, scouting force—Winner, San Francisco, Capt. R. C. Parker and Lieut. W. N. Rogers; runner-up, Houston, Capt. O. N. Barker and Lieut. Comdr. R. M. Preacher.

Cruisers, battle force—Winner, Milwaukee, Capt. F. H. Kelley and Lieut. Comdr. R. E. Blue; runner-up, Cincinnati, Capt. J. A. Logan, Lieut. Comdr. R. S. Smith and Lieut. Comdr. W. P. Mowatt.

Destroyers, flotilla one—Winner, Hull, Lieut. Comdr. K. S. Reed and Lieut. T. O. Oberrender; runner-up, Farragut, Lieut. Comdr. Lewis Corman and Lieut. C. Jackson.

Destroyers, flotilla two—Winner, Goff, Lieut. Comdr. H. G. Sickel and Lieut. (j. g.) G. H. Miller.

Destroyers, Asiatic squadron—Winner, Edsall, Lieut. Comdr. F. S. Conner, Lieut. Comdr. A. C. Babalot, Lieut. (j. g.) P. W. Winston and Ensign R. B. Kelly; runner-up, Stewart, Lieut. Comdr. R. O. Myers, Lieut. (j. g.) K. G. Chase, Lieut. M. R. Gerin and Ensign J. C. Shaw.

Light minelayers—Winner, Pruitt, Lieut. Comdr. P. C. Wirtz and Lieut. (j. g.) G. A. Crawford.

Aircraft, battle force—Winner, Saratoga, Capt. A. C. Read and Lieut. Comdr. M. J. Gillan.

Heavy destroyers—Winner, Winslow, Commander I. R. Chambers and Lieut. U. S. G. Sharp.

Submarines, first class—Winner, R-4, Lieut. M. P. Hottel and Lieut. (j. g.) B. L. Carr.

Submarines, second class—Winner, S-42, Lieut. R. B. Boyer, Lieut. O. O. Kirk and Lieut. (j. g.) W. N. Deragon.

Submarines, third class—Winner, Dolphin, Lieut. Comdr. M. J. Tichenor and Lieut. (j. g.) H. E. Ruble; runner-up, Narwhal, Lieut. Comdr. N. S. Ives and Lieut. J. A. Jordan.

Submarines, fourth class—Winner, S-40, Lieut. E. Olson, Lieut. R. C. Lake and Lieut. (j. g.) W. T. Kinsella.

Bonnet Indorses Campaign of Moral Rearmament

Delmonte, Calif., Aug. 3.—Georges Bonnet, French foreign minister, today joined the list of leaders of governments in the world who have indorsed the moral rearmament campaign.

In a message to headquarters here of the Second World Assembly for Moral Rearmament, he said "I am happy . . . to send my most sincere good wishes to the World Assembly for Moral Rearmament in California."

Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, already had termed moral rearmament the only hope for world peace.

Similar messages have been received from Robert Menzies, Australian prime minister; Baron Hiranuma, premier of Japan; Foreign Minister Patijn, of the Netherlands; Premier M. J. Savage, of New Zealand; Gen. and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, of China, and the heads of 13 other governments.

German in U. S. Since 1935 Now a Citizen

Mrs. Helen McGraw, Naturalization Court clerk, yesterday issued a certificate of citizenship to Herbert Wolff, 32, salesman of 1921 Kalorama road, whose application was approved earlier this week by Justice Luhring. Wolff, a native of Bochum, Germany, came to this country in 1935.

Coe Seeks Senate Seat of Andrews

Paris, Aug. 3 (AP).—Charles Francis Coe, American writer widely known for his stories of the gangster era, announced tonight his candidacy for United States Senator from Florida as an anti-New Deal Democrat.

Coe, known as "Socker" to many American readers and radio listeners, said he would enter the primaries next May for the seat now held by Senator Andrews, Democrat.

Station PDS Presents Hyattsville Soprano

MISS BERTHA HOWARD, Maryland avenue, Hyattsville, will be heard on this morning's PDS program over Station WMAL. Miss Howard has sung in the choirs of St. Jerome's Church in Hyattsville, and St. James' Church in Mount Rainier. She will present a program of semi-classical songs

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studios, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Store in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Painter Requests Help in Locating Bride of 5 Months

Harry Newborn Mills, sign painter, of 939 K street northwest, yesterday appealed for help in locating his bride of five months, Mrs. Lorraine Mills, 24.

Mills said his wife left theih home about 10:40 p. m. Saturday, saying she was going out to get some medicine for a headache. He said she wore a rose-colored dress, white shoes, and carried a brown bag containing about $2.

She was described as an attractive brunette, with blue eyes. She had been employed as a nurse in the 1100 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest.

U.S. Protests Destruction Of Catholic Property

Peiping (Friday), Aug. 4 (AP).—The United States Embassy protested to Japan today over the destruction of American Catholic property at Kweilin, Kwangsi Province, last Monday.

Police Disperse Car Plant Pickets

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP).—Violence in the General Motors strike continued today to keep the Detroit Police Department on an overtime schedule while representatives of the corporation and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers maintained their quest for a basis of settlement.

Several hundred policemen dispersed 100 or more pickets this afternoon at the gates of the Chevrolet gear and axle plant on Holbrook avenue, a trouble spot for several days.

Extortionist Sought $50,000 From Man Dead Since 1901

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—Miss Wanda Ruth Erickson, a servant, was charged with extortion today because of threatening demands for $50,000 addressed to a man who died 38 years ago.

A warrant issued by United States Commissioner E. K. Walker accused the 29-year-old woman of sending three letters, each warning the recipient would "be shot down in the street" if he failed to follow instructions.

Federal agents said she had directed them to Fred Harvey, founder of a chain of restaurants, because she "had seen his name on a lot of signs and figured he had a lot of money." She did not know he had died in 1901.

B. & O. Asks Loan Of RFC Extended

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve extension of the maturity of an $86,261,758 debt owed by the road to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. About $42,000,000 of the debt was due August 1, while the rest falls due April 1, 1942. The B. & O. asked that the maturity be extended to August 1, 1944.

The application for extension does not include certain notes held by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works totaling $2,955,000, which were acquired by the RFC, and also excludes $1,186,000 principal amount of equipment trust certificates.

The extension would be accomplished by giving the Government agency new notes to mature in five years after the road's plan of reorganization and capital readjustment is declared effective.

Paper Padlocked In Tax Delinquency

Jersey City, Aug. 3 (AP).—The collector of internal revenue padlocked today the Greenville Home News, a neighborhood weekly newspaper, for failure to pay $227 in social security taxes.

This week's issue, due today, did not appear and Editor Henry F. Auger said he would offer the newspaper for sale August 14. Auger said difficulties in operating the paper centered about differences over policies between him and the co-owner.

MRS. MARIE TERNOIR, 22, in court seeking a divorce, was awarded $12.50 a week temporary alimony after her attorney told the court her husband always was praying. "What's wrong with a prayer?" asked the judge. "Nothing," replied the lawyer, "but as soon as he reached the 'amen' he would quickly arise and sock Mrs. Ternoir on the jaw"

Diver Breaks Neck in Shallow Water; Rescued

Alvin Small, 18, of 516 North Highland street, Arlington, Va., was in serous condition at Emergency Hospital with a broken neck, yesterday, after diving into shallow water in the Potomac River at Sandy Beach.

Young Small, a filling station attendant, was pulled from the water by an unidentified onlooker, after he was seen struggling in the water, unable to stand. A motorboat hauling ice to a soda float took him to Thirty-sixth and K streets northwest, where the Emergency ambulance was called.

"He couldn't talk," said Jack Saunders, 18, of 2621 Second road north, Arlington, who went to the beach with Small. "He looked like his legs and arms were paralyzed."

Wm. Henderson, Star Machinist, Dies Unexpectedly

William Terrell Henderson, 41, died yesterday, apparently of a heart attack at his home in Randolph Terrace, 3900 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mr. Henderson, chief machinist for the Star, worked Wednesday and went from his work to Beaver Dam Country Club to play golf. Finishing 18 holes, he complained while in the locker room of illness. Going home, he went to bed.

He was born in Washington, February 22, 1898, and attended local schools. He was a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, and a life member of Lafayette Lodge of Masons. Besides his wife, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Paul S. Wilson and Mrs. David Albright, of Alexandria, and a brother, Joseph Henderson, of New Orleans.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

There are many lessons to be learned at contract, whether of human conduct or bidding and play. One of them is that carelessness is costly, and no one knows it better than the East player of today's hand. He took the lesson to heart and never again will he play a high card on the defense when a cheaper one will do. His error misled his partner as to the location of a lower card and made him fall victim to a pseudo-squeeze.

The hand and the optimistic bidding that took place are shown in today's box. That deal, played at the Princeton Club, was contributed by George C. Osborn, jr., who writes:

"Inclosed is a hand I recently played, which aptly portrays the pitfalls in which one can fall by the unnecessary play of a high card. Obviously (based on the bidding) if the declarer possesses the ace-jack of spades, the play of the queen has no effect, and if not, the ten suffices.

"Because of this initial error, a pseudo-squeeze worked effectively on West. To him it seemed a pseudo-Deschapelles coup.

"The spade five was led, East came up with the queen to force declarer's ace. Three rounds of clubs followed, declarer discarding the spade eight on the last round. The spade deuce was led to dummy's king and four rounds of hearts followed. On the lead of the last heart West, 'on the spot,' threw a diamond and declarer took 'top on the board'."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

A YEAR AGO the Federal Diary watched with enthusiasm the steaming up on all sides of interest in the merit system and commented to this broad effect: If these boons and benefits—enlarging of personnel offices with practical men, the formulation of a real promotions system and a program of in-service training—are ever to be made a reality, then the time to strike and lay on the pressure is the moment Congress convenes in 1939.

Possibly it can't be denied that the pressure was put on Congress, but the fact remains—as written in the record to date—that the Congress wasn't "sold." Maybe the case for merit wasn't properly made—more likely the Congress doesn't want any of it.

But an elaborate, and, in the main commendable program was given the Congress as stemming from the executive orders of last June. In The Post yesterday was this telling paragraph:

"Unless the Senate alters the item in the third deficiency appropriation bill, the President's program for giving Federal workers special training courses and an opportunity for promotions based on competitive examinations will be hamstrung until next year."

THERE IS THE WHOLE story as far as anyone can tell it at this time. All the experts yesterday could see no "out" for the elaborate program this year and all were frankly pessimistic in the outlook for Congress taking merit on its lap.

Of course, the high-born idea for a personnel scientifically trained isn't dead. And the personnel officers, normally harrassed, can continue through the year putting into effect whatever improvements they find possible.

But the truth is—as best The Diary could search out opinion yesterday—Congress doesn't take to the notion of in-service training. It is viewed almost universally there as a high-flown, technical, and probably useless adventuring. And all "the captains, bards and keepers of the sheep" can't predict when the Congress will win to the idea that a trained personnel will give the service efficiency and some apparatus for economy among employes.

THE HILL looks slightly more favorably on the promotions idea, and is willing—as has been demonstrated in figures—to see the personnel offices cut down or at least kept the way they are. And as for the Council of Personnel Administration which was to foster and push all of the proposed mechanisms of improvement—it got nearly half the money that it asked for.

And the one last sweetly solmen thought goes back to something else said a year ago. There was considerable talk then of how the voters in all the land had become sold on the merit system idea. The voters, it was said, would put pressure on Congress to give merit a break. It got a break—in the neck. Somfehow, we had thought that the voters weren't yet so conscious of merit as some were thinking.

Education of voters was being pressed by the several interested organizations, but it hadn't become entirely or even partly effective. If it had, the Ramspeck civil service bill wouldn't be bottled up until next year, promotions wouldn't be out until next year and some sort of training program would have gone into effect through action of this Congress.

Day, internationally known statistician in the Forest Service, leaves Saturday for Scotland to deliver a paper before a learned congress or scientists.

The President's veto of the Washington firemen's 60-hour-week bill yesterday brought a statement from George J. Richardson, secretary-treasurer of International Association of Fire Fighters, that fire fighters everywhere in the country are disappointed and disillusioned.

"If it was a disappointment to the Washington fire fighters it was more than a disappointment to the fire fighters of the United States. It was a disillusionment to them because for many years the fire fighters of the Nation had admired the leadership of the President in his fight for shorter hours, security wages and many pieces of legislation beneficial to the working people," he stated.

He said the fire fighters are "loyal citizens" and "will always give to the public every ounce of energy they can give to see that the public is protected in every respect."

The cost, Richardson said, was one of the reasons given by the President for the veto. It would necessitate the employment of 207 additional men. "But even so—with over 10,000,000 persons unemployed—this would result in at least relieving some unemployment," he said.

NUTS AND JOLTS

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter 39

THE END OF January brought continued warmth. There would be frost, even, perhaps, a freeze again, before spring truly came. But the balmy days were a harbinger. Penny plowed the fields that would have early crops. He turned the new ground that Buck had cleared for him during his illness from the rattler's striking. He had decided to try a little cotton for a money crop. The low ground near the north hammock would go into tobacco. He prepared his seed beds between the house and the grape arbor. With the stock reduced to old Caesar and Trixie, he decided to plant cow peas more sparingly and to put the extra land into corn. There seemed never to be enough. The chickens went short of feed, the hogs were not properly fattened, the Baxter's themselves gave out of meal at the end of summer, all for lack of enough corn. Nothing on the clearing was more important. Jody helped him carry the winter's compost from the lot and scatter it over the sandy acres. He planned to have the ground in good condition, bedded up and ready to plant in early March, by the time the first whip-poor-will should call.

Ma Baxter complained bitterly that she had always wanted a ginger bed. Everyone else had one. The storekeeper's wife at the river had promised her roots any time she was ready for them. Penny and Jody prepared the bed. They dug down four feet deep at the side of the house and laid down cypress slats. They hauled clay from the southwest and filled it in. The first time he went trading to the river, Penny promised to bring back the roots, knobby and peaked, like antlers.

The hunting was poor. The bears were feeding over a wide range, preparing themselves to go in February into hibernation. Their dens were under up-turned hurricane stumps, or where two large logs lay crosed, affording protection. Sometimes they dragged in oak and palmetto limbs and piled them in a hollow tree to make a rough nest. Wherever the bed, it was hollowed out in a trench, over the edge of which the bear would rest his forequarters. Jody thought that it was strange they did not go into winter beds in December, when the first really cold weather came, and then come out earlier, in March instead of April.

"I reckon they know their own business," Penny said.

THE DEER were distressingly scarce, both because of the plague and the increased voracity of the remaining killers. The bucks were in poor condition, the meat lean, their coats moss-gray and shabby. They wandered usually alone. The does traveled alone or in pairs. An old doe traveled with a maiden doe, or with her male yearling. Many of the does were already heavy with fawn.

The principal work once the land was turned was hauling in wood and chopping and splitting it for both fireplaces. Wood at least was more easily gotten than ever before, for the storm had brought down large numbers of trees, and the weakening of their roots from the long days of rain and steady wind had toppled still more. Timber had died by the acre in the low places. The effect was as though fire, not flood, had passed through such sections, for the dead trees stood gray and naked.

Penny said, "Now I'm proud I live in a high place. Hit'd fret me, havin' to look at all that bleakness."

Jody loved the morning jaunts for wood as well as a hunt. They were leisurely. Penny would hitch old Caesar to toe wagon on a cool sparkling morning after breakfast, and they would jog one way or another along as the road as their fancy took them. The dogs would trot under the wagon and Flag would gallop ahead or to the side. He looked peculiarly wise in his buckskin collar. They would turn off into a clear place in the woods and prowl on foot for a suitable fallen tree, water oak or yellow pine by preference. There was abundant fat pine. This made the hottest and brightest hearth-fire and made fine kindling, but it smoked and smuttied the pots and kettles. They would take turns chopping, or use the cross-cut saw together. Jody liked the rhythmic swing of the saw, the singing hum as it ate into the wood, the sweet smell of the sawdust sifting to the ground.

The dogs nosed nearby in the bushes or ran rabbits. Flag nibbled at the leaf-buds or found a succulent sprig of grass that had escaped the frost. Penny always carried his shotgun. Sometimes Julia ran a rabbit within range, or a fox squirrel whisked injudiciously up a nearby pine and there was pilau for supper. One day a pure white fox squirrel peered boldly at them and Penny would not shoot. It was a curiosity, he said, like the albino 'coon. The meat of old Slewfoot had been coarse and stringy with age and it took long cooking to tender it. The Baxters had been glad when the last of it was gone. Most of it had been smoked for the dogs, and while it would have been edible in necessity, no one was ever tempted to ask for it. His fat, however, tried out, filled a large wooden bucket. It was as clear and golden as early honey and was fine for all cooking. The cracklings were as flavory as those from a prime hog. There was a double satisfaction whenever any of the Baxters snapped them between their teeth.

Ma Baxter spent long hours at her quilting. Penny held Jody to his lessons. The evenings were spent by the hearth-fire, blazing brightly to supply light as well as heat. The wind howled cozily around the house. On still nights of moonlight, the foxes could be heard barking in the hammock. Then the lesson stopped and Penny nodded to Jody and they listened together. The foxes seldom came to raid the Baxter hen-roost.

"They know ever' hair o' Julia's head," Penny chuckled. "They ain't temptin' Providence."

ONE COLD BRIGHT night at the end of January, Penny and Ma Baxter had gone to bed while Jody lingered with Flag by the fire. He heard a sound outside in the yard, as though the dogs were scuffling. The commotion was livelier than the pair usually made. He went to the front window and pressed his face to the cold pane. A strange dog was romping with Rip in play. Julia watched tolerantly. He caught his breath. It was not a dog. It was a gray wolf, lean and lame. He turned to run and call his father, then, irresistibly drawn, went back to watch again. Wolf and dog had plainly played together before. They were not strangers. They played silently, as though the dogs kept the secret. Jody went to the door of the bedroom and called softly. Penny came.

"What's the matter, son?"

Jody tiptoed to the window, beckoning. Penny followed on bare feet and looked out where Jody pointed. He whistled under his breath. He made no move for his gun. They watched silently. In the bright moonlight the motions of the animals were plain. The visitor was crippled in one hip. Its movements were clumsy.

Penny whispered, "Someway piteeful, ain't it?"

Penny nodded.

"Hit's almost certain the last one. Pore thing, hurt and lonesome—Come visitin' it's nighest kin to pick a play."

Perhaps the sibilance of their whispers reached beyond the closed window or their scent drifted to its nose. Soundlessly, it turned and left the dogs and clambered with difficulty over the fence and was gone into the night.

Jody said, "Will it do harm here?"

Penny stretched out his fet to the embers on the hearth.

"I mis-doubt it's in shape to ketch itself a square meal. I'd not dream o' bothrin' it. A bear'll finish it, or a panther. Leave it live out the rest of its life."

They squatted together by the hearth, caught up in the sadness and the strangeness. It was a harsh thing, even for a wolf, to be so alone that it must turn to the yard of its enemy for comapnionship. Jody laid an arm across Flag. He wished Flag could understand that he had been spared desolation in the forest. As for himself, Flag had eased a loneliness that had harassed him in the very heart of his family.

He saw the lone wolf once again on the waning moon. It never came again. By tacit consent, its visits were not revealed to Ma Baxter. She would have demanded its death, whether or no. Penny believed that the dogs had made its acquaintance on one of their hunts, or perhaps when they were cutting wood and the dogs had wandered away on their own business.

In February, Penny became badly crippled for a time with his rheumatism. It had botherd him for several years in cold or wet weather. He was careless always about exposure, doing whatever he wished to do, or what seemed necessary, regardless of the weather and unsparing of himself. It was as good a time as any, Ma Baxter said, for him to be paid up, but he was uneasy for fear he would not be ready for his spring planting.

"Then let Jody do it," she said impatiently.

"He's never done nothing' but foller me at it. There's so many things a boy kin do wrong at sich work as that."

"Yes, and whose fault is it he don't know more about it. You've spared him too long. When you was nearly 13 wasn't you plowin' like a man?"

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics

BY BOB ZUPPKE

A JOB PLAYING AT A SWELL RESORT LIKE THIS—A CRACK AT RADIO—ALL OVERBOARD IN A FEW SHORT MINUTES!
WE'RE A FLOP—WE MIGHT AS WELL GO BACK TO CARTERVILLE AND WALK UP ALLEYS

I'M SORRY, BOYS—BUT WHY THE DICKENS DIDN'T YOU PLAY THAT SWELL CARTER SONG FOR YOUR AUDITION?
WHAT DO YOU MEAN, WHY DIDN'T WE? THAT'S WHAT WE PLAYED

YOU DID? THEN SOMETHING WENT WRONG! WE HEARD THE WRONG BAND IN THE AUDITION ROOM—GRAB YOUR INSTRUMENTS, BOYS, AND COME WITH ME!

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE

BY MARTHA ORR

THEM TWO HULKS COULDN'T BOIL WATER WITHOUT SCORCHIN' IT! WHY, IF I LEFT HERE, THEY'D BE STARVED LIKE A COUPLE O' RUNT PIGS IN A DAY'S TIME!
IS THAT SO? WELL, WELL!

TESSIE, HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO COME AND LIVE WITH US FOR AWHILE?
GEE, THAT'D BE THE REAL CHEESE! BUT HOW ABOUT UNCLE RUFE AN' UNCLE RAFE?

Gleaming Silver Fox on GLAMOROUS COATS

Lavishly Mounted on Famous FORSTMANN, JUILLIARD and BOTANY FABRICS

Featured in The Hecht Co.'s Annual Advance Sale!

Silver Fox! Never before have we been able to achieve such value in full skin silver fox trimmed coats . . . you may never see such prices again . . .

The fabrics themselves are every bit as aristocratic as the fur trimmings . . . and worthy of our most glowing terms of praise. Not only the new Onde—but such famous ones as Forstmann, Julliard and Botany! You'll marvel at the new textures in fabrics . . . the smoother surface that makes for beautiful draping . . . the new and ingenious ways of mounting the silver fox trimmings. Shawl collars, Epaulet collars, double bumps collars and revers—everything that's fashion right and foremost in the fall and winter picture. In black, of course, and in sizes for misses and women.
